Picket defense: ACT UP demonstrators in 1988 held firm against police officers who tried to stop their demo at Burroughs-Wellcome headquarters in Burlingame.

ACT UP:

Ten years on the front lines of an epidemic

by Matthew Sharp, ACT UP/Golden Gate
Writers Pool

Ten years ago, hundreds of angry AIDS activists shocked and surprised corporate America by stopping trade at the New York Stock Exchange, targeting Burroughs-Wellcome over the price of AZT. ACT UP, the AIDS Coalition To Unleash Power, a grass-roots direct action movement, was born. Never before had a patient advocacy group gone to such extremes in order to effect change. Never before had trading at the New York Stock Exchange stopped cold.

In San Francisco, people with AIDS mobilized as early as 1985, when the AIDS/ARC Vigil was begun. In 1988, a group of about 300 protesters marched 15 miles to the Burroughs-Wellcome office in Burlingame to protest the high cost of AZT. Some things never change.

Later, the San Francisco chapter of ACT UP was born out of AIDS Action Pledge, a San Francisco direct action group, at about the same time as the New York Wall Street action. ACT UP/Golden Gate split from ACT UP/San Francisco in October 1990, in order to focus on treatment issues. The remaining group that worked on AIDS social justice issues under the

by Cynthia Laird

A big party to celebrate the tenth anniversary of ACT UP's formation will be held in San Francisco on Monday, March 10. ACT UP/Golden Gate will host the "ACT UP Ten Year Bash." Hundreds of activists are expected to be reunited during an evening of mirth, entertainment, music, comedy, camp, and an abundance of birthday cake, said event organizer Michael Lauro.

The festive party will honor the groundbreaking achievements of thousands of unpaid ACT UP activists throughout the world, and the historic explosion of chapters that literally became the "ACT UP phenomenon."

ACT UP/Golden Gate members promise a tasty spaghetti dinner buffet, prepared by local chefs, for a bargain donation of $10 per person. Area restaurants have also helped out by generously donating bottles of wine, glasses of which will be sold at Monday's dinner.

"The full-time, in-your-face volunteer group ... promises to leave name ACT UP/San Francisco became defunct in 1994, and the individuals currently using that name have no affiliation or working relationship with other ACT UP chapters.

"Crash the Market," a demonstration commemorating the 1987 Wall Street action and ten years of the ACT UP movement, will take place Monday, March 23 in New York City. AIDS activists from across the country once again will risk arrest on Wall Street targeting the AIDS drug industry, including Glaxo-Wellcome. The demonstration is a symbolic action against the continued greed and profiteering of the AIDS industry. Billions of dollars have been made, tens of thousands have died.

State bills affect your future

by Marghe Covino
B.A.R. Capitol Correspondent

Gay lobbyists and legislative staff members in Sacramento are asking the gay and lesbian community for help. A number of new bills have been introduced that can have great impact on gays and lesbians, and staffers are asking people to write letters to the appropriate legislators and to follow the bills through the legislative process.

"Letters really do make a difference," said Jennifer Richard, policy consultant to speaker Pro Tem Sheila Kuehl (D-Los Angeles). "People have been led to believe they should only write letters to their direct representatives, but that's not the code."

"When legislators speak from their offices they are representing the interests of their districts, but when they are in committee they are doing the state's business and represent the interests of all of the people in the state. That's why it's important to write committee members or the chair of committee in which your bill is being heard - they really do take those letters into consid-

life-long treatment plan for HIV should include therapies that not only work, but which you can live with.

All individuals depicted are HIV positive.

What's your STRATEGY...?

If you are thinking about starting therapy for HIV or are already receiving therapy, it's never too early—or too late—to develop a strategy for the long term.

The latest evidence from a variety of clinical trials as well as patient experiences indicates that delay of disease progression and prolonged survival are now within reach.

As a result, there is a new sense of optimism that HIV will eventually be managed as a long-term, chronic disease. The question is: How do you plan for the long run?

The Experts Are Divided...

There have been major advances in treatment of HIV. A larger number of medications are currently available for treatment and more are in development. However, there are still many questions to be answered. Even the experts have differing opinions as to the best way to use all of these new options.

Currently, there are two schools of thought regarding antiretroviral treatment.

Hit hard, hit early?

One approach is to "hit hard, hit early." Because we now have new information about how quickly the HIV virus replicates (or reproduces itself) from the very outset of infection, some experts believe that treatment should begin as an attack with the most intensive therapy possible. They feel that eliminating as much of the virus as possible as quickly as possible is the most important consideration.

...or develop a sequencing strategy?

However, many other experts feel that successful long-term HIV therapy requires more than strong medicine. These experts believe that a life-long treatment plan for HIV disease should include therapies that not only work, but which you can live with, as well. Since "drug holidays" can contribute to treatment failure, they are concerned that the side effects and demanding dosing schedules of some anti-HIV drugs could cause people to skip doses or take less than the proper amount of their medicine. While the risk posed by drug-resistant strains of HIV is not completely known, HIV specialists are also concerned that, if resistance develops to drugs used early in therapy, the virus could become less sensitive to future treatments too.

Therefore, they recommend sequencing combinations of drugs, based on a number of factors, including an individual's symptoms, CD4 cell count and blood-level of HIV, previous treatments, lifestyle and future therapeutic options.

Where to Begin?

The goal of therapy is staying healthy for as long as possible, and, over the long run, you'll use many different regimens. How do you plan effectively?

You and your health care professional should design a personal treatment strategy. You'll need to look at the overall picture and develop a regimen based on your needs and your condition at different times. A regimen should be chosen based on several factors:

- Efficacy (effectiveness, how well it works)
- Tolerability (safety, risk of side effects)
- Convenience (how well the dosing fits with your lifestyle)
- Drug interactions (whether it can be used with other medications you may be taking)

- Sequencing (the expectation that there will be another drug to turn to as your needs change)

Only by taking into consideration all the criteria can an effective, long-term HIV treatment strategy be developed.

What Can You Do Now...?

The most important thing you can do is to take an active role in your treatment. You are your own best advocate. Ask questions. Work with your health care professional in making educated choices to develop an effective treatment strategy for the long term. Make the commitment to take your medication exactly as prescribed and stick to it. Plan for a healthy lifestyle incorporating proper nutrition and exercise. Be aware of current research results and new trends in treatment. Seek the support of family and friends, health care professionals, AIDS Service Organizations and other institutions. The time has never been better to map your own strategy and plan for the future.

AIDS Office rules in SF sex clubs

by Liz Highleyman

The San Francisco Department of Public Health (DPH) AIDS Office on February 21 sent letters to sex clubs in the city, informing them that a new set of "minimum standards" is now in effect, and inspections will begin shortly.

In the letter, AIDS Office Director Dr. Mitchell Katz stated that "San Francisco is committed to protecting the health and safety of the public by ensuring that businesses are operating in compliance with all city codes and regulations, and that they do not permit sexual activity that places patrons at increased risk for HIV."

Katz went on to state that "the city will take legal action to close sex clubs and parties that violate city codes and/or operate in a manner that contributes to the spread of HIV and STD [sexually transmitted disease]," and that "no action will be taken" against clubs and parties that are in compliance. Katz outlined a coordinated inspection process in which announced joint inspections by the health, fire, and building departments will be carried out for all sex clubs and parties. In addition, DPH staff "will continue to make regular visits, both announced and unannounced" to ensure that sex clubs and parties follow DPH standards regarding sexual activity. Katz stated that the city would work with club and party operators to "resolve any issues" regarding compliance, but that "clubs may have to close or limit their operation" if violations exist.

Minimum Standards

The DPH's "Minimum Standards for Operation of Sex Clubs and Parties" state that unprotected anal and vaginal intercourse and fisting "have been identified as posing an unreasonable risk for HIV transmission and therefore are prohibited in all sex clubs and parties"; there is, in fact, no evidence to show that fisting increases HIV risk. In addition, the standards suggest that club owners "recommend" that patrons not engage in unprotected oral sex, rimming, fingering, or sharing of sex toys.

The standards further specify that clubs must provide condoms, lubricants, gloves, plastic or latex barriers, and safer sex educational materials. All areas of the club "must be monitored on a regular and ongoing basis by staff" — at least one time every 20 minutes — and staff "must intervene immediately to stop activities if patrons are engaging in prohibited sexual activities." Clubs must be sufficiently well-lit to allow monitoring and may not have locking booths or rooms, or rooms that cannot be viewed from the outside.

The new regulations were adapted from voluntary standards developed by the Coalition for Healthy Sex (CHS). The CHS began to modify their standards two years ago when Supervisor Tom Ammanno approached the group for assistance in developing legislation to regulate sex clubs. At the time, the majority of CHS members supported legislation, believing that it would provide legitimacy and shield the clubs from arbitrary harassment by city officials. In November, Katz announced that Mayor Willie Brown had withdrawn his support for the legislation and that regulations would instead be implemented by the DPH.

If the legislation had gone forward, an opportunity for public comment would have been mandatory. As it stands, the DPH is not required to solicit public input, and has not done so as of this date. It is the position of the AIDS Office that the CHS meetings at which the regulations were discussed were in fact a venue for public comment; CHS meetings are open to the public, but until recently have not been publicized. Many in the gay community have expressed outrage that the city would put through regulations without public input, and various activist groups have formulated plans to prevent the DPH from carrying out their new policy.

The establishments that received the DPH letter during the "first round" are Blow Buddies, the Campus Theatre, Castro Party/Black House, Circle J Cinema, EROS, the "14th Street House," Mack, Power Exchange Main Station and Substation, the Sling, and the Tearoom Theatre. Regulation opponents had complained previously that sex club were selectively targeted while establishments such as theaters, bookstores, and hot tub facilities were ignored. All of the venues that received letters cater to a primarily gay clientele, except for the Power Exchange Substation, which attracts a mixed bisexual/transgender/heterosexual/leather crowd. ▼

SFGH to provide 'morning-after' pill

by Lidia Wasowicz,
UPI Science Writer

Researchers at San Francisco General Hospital announced Monday, February 28 they plan to begin testing a "morning-after" pill for HIV in the next couple of months.

The aim of the study will be to determine whether the treatment can do for AIDS what the "morning-after" pill does for pregnancy — prevent the consequences of one night of bad luck or unsafe behavior.

Participants would be healthy individuals exposed to the deadly virus during one incident of risky sex. They would be given a 30-day supply of AZT and 3TC in hopes of preventing infection.

AIDS prevention experts express concern that the therapy could blow the lid off the long-sought trend toward restrained behavior that has, in part, been credited for the first decrease in AIDS deaths since the epidemic began. But the researchers say if the strategy saves lives, it's worth the gamble.

The experiment — to see whether a brew of AIDS-fighting drugs the morning after an isolated incident of unsafe sex or broken condom can prevent the virus from taking its deadly hold — has its roots in the promising results of recent studies.

Those studies of similar prophylactic therapy given to healthcare workers accidentally stuck by HIV-contaminated needles indicate a 30-day course of the anti-viral drug AZT dramatically reduced the chance of infection.

Tom Coates, director of the AIDS Research Institute at the University of California, San Francisco, says, "If there is a way we can prevent somebody from getting infected, we should."

The San Francisco Health Department hopes to get federal approval and dollars for the trial within two months. Participants will receive a combination of the anti-viral drugs AZT and 3TC. Thousands more would have to test the treatment to determine if it really works, but the San Francisco study could provide data on how often isolated exposures take place, how quickly patients would get treatment, and how many would actually agree to the 30-day regimen. ▼

The Castro set to invade the Castro

by Claudia Figueroa

San Franciscans will have a chance to learn about the fascinating history of the world's most famous gay and lesbian neighborhood Saturday, March 15, when KQED-TV Channel 9 will broadcast the third in its series, "Neighborhoods: The Hidden Cities of San Francisco," focusing on the Castro area. But for those people who have to be on the cutting edge, and simply cannot wait that long, KQED will host a private benefit party and big-screen showing at the most appropriate place — the Castro Theatre — Thursday, March 13.

David Shaw, director of communications at KQED, explained to the Bay Area Reporter that the 90-minute documentary, which will feature chronicled vintage photographs and film clips, is being underwritten by a unique multi-level campaign organized by the public television station. The campaign, modeled in no small part on the San Francisco Public Library's efforts to raise funding for its new gay and lesbian center, has already raised 70% of the video's production costs.

In addition, KQED is asking for donations from anyone who would like to attend the big-screening gala. The station is specifically encouraging residents of the Castro district to take part in this spectacular event and share in the film's success.

According to organizers, the Castro Theatre event will feature traditional organ music preceding the show, and comedian Sabrina Matthews will perform stand-up skits. Beverages and hors d'oeuvres donated by Fire Wood Cafe, Ryan's Restaurant, Zuni Cafe, Absolut Vodka, Crystal Geyser Water Company, and DeLoach Vineyards will be presented to guests.

Catering services will also be provided by Grace Street Catering.

Emmy Award-winning producer Peter L. Stein, who served as producer, director, and writer for the film, said it required a lot of research, development, and production time.

"Like most momentous projects, this film took nine months giving birth to it. Quite naturally, I feel relieved," Stein told the Bay Area Reporter. "It's a dramatic story that happened in our midst and to our community. I am happy to be able to tell it." ▼

The event begins at 7:30 p.m. and will last through most of the evening. Peter Stein will be available for questions preceding the show. Tickets for the event start at $50 per person, which includes a basic KQED membership. For more information on tickets and donations, call (415) 553-2150.

AIDS Nightline needs volunteers, training session starts March 13

by Cynthia Laird

Volunteers are needed for the AIDS/HIV Nightline, the only telephone service of its kind in the country that provides emotional support and peer counseling nightly for all HIV concerns. Rolph Shanabruch, volunteer coordinator for the hotline, said training will start on Thursday, March 13.

"We're in desperate need of 12 to 15 volunteers," Shanabruch told the B.A.R. "The biggest challenge is getting people who are available to work at night."

Nighttime is when the service is provided; from 5 p.m. to 5 a.m. every night, he said. Volunteers answer approximately 900 calls a month from those who are worried, sick, or dying. The majority of calls are from people in the Bay Area, but the nightline also receives calls from people throughout the country.

Shanabruch said people interested in volunteering should be good listeners and be able to relate to others with a sense of caring and understanding. Volunteers are asked to commit to working a few nighttime hours each month.

The Nightline is a program of San Francisco Suicide Prevention. It is funded through the city's Department of Public Health AIDS Office and through contributions from numerous corporate foundations and companies. ▼

HRC rules against Cafe in het kissing incident

by Cynthia Laird

In a highly unusual ruling, San Francisco's Human Rights Commission (HRC) issued a Director's Finding against The Cafe on Tuesday, February 25, citing the popular gay and lesbian bar with violating city anti-discrimination laws. The case stemmed from an incident last year where four people were kicked out of The Cafe because two of them - a man and a woman - were kissing. It is unusual in that a gay man who was with the opposite-sex pair was the person who filed the complaint.

Damon Jacobs contacted HRC about the incident last September 13 and described the incident that occurred on August 11, 1996, when he and three friends, Tara Sanderson, Christopher Macias, and Rob Cox, were forced to leave The Cafe after Sanderson and Cox were seen kissing. Jacobs also alleged The Cafe's policy against public displays of affection discriminates on the basis of sexual orientation because it is applied only to opposite-sex couples, and that the policy was publicly expressed in a letter written by Morgan Gorrono, manager at The Cafe.

Gorrono said he's frustrated with HRC's finding, particularly since the complainant, Jacobs, is gay. Gorrono said he frequently gets complaints from his gay and lesbian customers when men and women kiss or grope one another at the establishment.

He speculated that opposite-sex couples continue to come to The Cafe because the Muni F Line trolley drops passengers off "right behind the bar."

"It's usually a guy and a girl looking for a three-way," Gorrono said, offering his take on why opposite-sex couples come into the bar.

"This is ridiculous," he said of HRC's finding. "The thing was that drunk people were getting kicked out of the bar."

"It's defeating us. We have problems with too many straight people in the bar. I get four to five complaints a night from gay customers."

Countered Jacobs, "My response is we don't serve each other well by violating the law."

No touching, now

In a letter that was published in the September 19, 1996 Bay Area Reporter, Gorrono stated the club's "policy on straight people making out ... will not change ... If they don't like it, they can leave. This is a gay bar, and they are the guests of our community."

Reached Monday, March 3, Gorrono has apparently changed that policy, saying, "We have a 'no touch' policy for everybody." He said he refuses to post that policy, as HRC staff proposed during attempts to mediate the complaint.

Gorrono also said he plans to meet or contact HRC staff now that the finding has been issued. He did not respond to numerous calls and letters sent to him by HRC before the finding was issued.

Because The Cafe is a private business and does not have a contract with the city, HRC staff member Cynthia Goldstein said the HRC can only issue a finding

"when mediation fails and there's evidence of discrimination." She said HRC staff would be happy to work with The Cafe in the future regarding the discrimination finding.

This type of decision is rarely issued in cases that involve allegations of discrimination based on sexual orientation, HIV, or gender identity issues, Goldstein said.

"I've worked at the HRC for six and a half years, and this is the first time I've ever had to issue a finding," Goldstein told the B.A.R. "In complaints around sexual orientation, HIV, and gender identity, this is only the second finding in over six years. It's extremely unusual."

Jacobs didn't expect to file the complaint; initially, he and his friends thought there had been a misunderstanding that could be quickly resolved with an apology from The Cafe. That did not happen. His friends totally supported his decision to go to the HRC. Sanderson has since returned to her home in Australia; Cox and Macias live in the city.

Goldstein attempted to engage in mediation with both Gorrono and The Cafe's owner, Pornchai Hutachinda. Since The Cafe "refused to engage in mediation," HRC director Marivic S. Bamba issued this finding, the HRC report stated.

The HRC found The Cafe "denied full and equal access to its business establishment." The ruling also stated The Cafe violated a section of the San Francisco's Municipal Code when it printed its discriminatory policy that "... full enjoyment ... would be unlawfully refused to individuals because of their sexual orientation."

According to the HRC finding, Gorrono failed to follow through last October on a proposed resolution that included issuing an apology to the four individuals; revising The Cafe's policy to comply with city law; having a letter printed in the B.A.R.; and allowing the revised policy to be posted in a public place at the business.

'I got upset'

According to The Cafe's side of the story, which Gorrono outlined both in his letter last September and in a phone call with HRC staff, a bartender refused to serve Sanderson and Cox a drink because Sanderson could not stop laughing and because the bartender determined that the two had had enough to drink. Gorrono stated that this was explained to Jacobs by the bartender, and at that moment, Sanderson and Cox started kissing.

The couple was asked to stop, and The Cafe's "no straight couple make-out" policy was explained. An argument ensued before a bouncer asked Jacobs, Sanderson, Cox, and Macias to leave. Jacobs wrote a note to Gorrono the next day asking for an apology. The Cafe refused to apologize.

Gorrono recalled a phone conversation he had with Goldstein and admitted he became angry as they talked. "I got upset with her. I get a lot more complaints from gay customers."

Mariah Hanson, manager of the Girl's Spot, a weekly dance club, sympathized with Gorrono and said she has also asked heterosexual couples not to kiss in her club.

"Eight out of ten times it's the lesbians bringing in the straight men," she said. "I get complaints there are too many straight people and too many men, and it gets difficult."

"Whose needs do you respond to?"

But, she said, "Have I ever kicked anyone out? No."

Jacobs told the B.A.R. that he's happy with the HRC finding, and never saw the matter as a gay or straight issue.

"It's a human rights issue," said Jacobs. "What does this say about The Cafe's attitude towards the bisexual community? Where do bisexuals fit in terms of our [gay] businesses?"

Jacobs contends that HRC's finding that The Cafe denied full and equal access to customers and published a policy that violates city law leaves the business "wide open" to a lawsuit.

But, he said, "I have no interest in personally pursuing that. I like to think of our community as progressive and tolerant." ▼

Info sought on Castro robbery suspect

by Dennis Conkin

San Francisco police are circulating a poster throughout the Castro district, seeking information from gay or bisexual victims of a robber who they say was criminally active in the gay community until his recent arrest.

Elliot Phillips was re-booked on robbery and other charges on February 24, officials told the B.A.R. He pled guilty to one felony count of assault likely to create great bodily injury at his preliminary hearing Wednesday, March 5.

Phillips is described by law enforcement officials as a very muscular 36-year-old African-American male, standing 6 feet tall and weighing 200 pounds. Investigators allege he met his gay and bisexual victims in bars or on the street and later robbed them, either at their homes or elsewhere.

"I think it is important for the community to be concerned about this kind of predator," said District Attorney spokesman John Shanley. He urged anyone who was victimized by Phillips, or who has information on his alleged crimes, to contact DA Investigator Charlie Munoz at (415) 553-1030, or SFPD Robbery Inspector Stephen Tittel at (415) 553-1201. ▼

Muni driver gets probation for bashing

by Dennis Conkin

Anti-violence experts and prosecutors are denouncing Superior Judge John Berman's decision that allowed Muni Railway driver Wardy Joubert to enter a surprise plea of no contest to felony assault and hate crime charges, in exchange for three years probation and a possible community service penalty.

Joubert was charged with assaulting Muni passenger Sonny Vukic last July, while both men were passengers on a 4 Sutter bus. Joubert was off duty, but dressed in a Muni Railway uniform, at the time.

Berman suggested and the defense accepted the open court plea during a pre-trial conference in Berman's chambers Thursday, February 27, over the objections of Deputy District Attorney Maria Bee.

Berman entered the no contest pleas as guilty pleas, and ordered a probation report pending Joubert's sentencing in Superior Court March 27.

Although prosecutor Bee declined to comment publicly on Berman's decision, Deputy District Attorney Chuck Haines expressed "serious concern" over the disposition of the case — and bluntly said that Joubert belonged behind bars.

"We want him to go to state prison because of the outrageous nature of this act," Haines said. "The public at large is very concerned about the problem of violence on Muni. Although he was not driving the bus, he was a bus driver wearing a uniform, and his motive was a hate crime. This makes it doubly outrageous."

Where are your morals?

According to eyewitnesses to the June attack, Vukic and his lover were riding together and briefly kissed as Vukic's lover was getting off the bus. Joubert became agitated when he saw the men kiss, threatened to kill Vukic, called the pair "faggots," and made anti-gay religious statements such as, "Don't you read the Bible?" and "Where are your morals?"

Witnesses also said that after Vukic told him to shut up, Joubert said that he had the authority to order the gay men off the bus, challenged Vukic to a fight, repeatedly slugged the victim, and injured Vukic's leg by grabbing and twisting it in an effort to pull him from his seat.

The driver of the bus, who refused to stop the vehicle or intervene in the incident, also faces disciplinary action because of his inadequate response to a physical attack on a passenger.

Although he suffered no broken bones in the attack, Vukic suffered physical injuries, including continuing spinal disc problems, according to his attorney Thomas Ray, and will probably be unable to practice his manipulative physical therapy profession.

Vukic also suffered psychic and emotional trauma during the anti-gay attack, said Ray.

Hate violence experts charge that Berman's decision trivializes anti-gay violence and sends the wrong message to individuals who commit such crimes.

In a stinging public rebuke, Community United Against Violence Executive Director Lester Olmstead-Rose called Berman's decision "irresponsible and incredibly inappropriate."

Olmstead-Rose said that individuals who acted violently against lesbians and gays "deserved to be off the street" for the public safety, and said that the community, as well as Vukic, had been victimized by the assault.

"He attacked these victims without provocation," Olmstead-Rose pointed out. "Clearly, the judge does not understand that hate violence is not the same as other kinds of assault. The judge is way off line."

Although the attack happened last July, Joubert was not relieved of his driving duties and assigned a desk job until last December 13, when the Bay Area Reporter raised policy questions about his assignment as a floater driver assigned to any Muni line as needed.

Joubert's status as a Municipal Railway employee is in doubt at B.A.R. presstime.

"It is not Muni's policy to hire or retain an employee who has been convicted of these violent felonies," said Muni communications manager Sharyn Saslafsky. "Muni is considering all of its disciplinary options, up to and including termination." ▼

More Muni driver homophobia

by Mike Salinas

Passengers on a Castro-bound Muni bus Sunday, March 2 were startled to hear the driver suddenly unleash a torrent of anti-gay verbal abuse that lasted for more than 15 minutes.

Paul Campos, a gay man who boarded the #24 bus at California and Divisadero streets, told the Bay Area Reporter that the driver began by impatiently shouting at passengers who apparently didn't speak English. When Campos intervened and suggested the driver should be more considerate, he became the target of the man's rage.

"At first, he stopped and got off the bus and refused to drive," Campos said. "Then he started screaming about 'the gays,' calling us an abomination against humanity and messengers of Satan."

According to Campos, the abuse lasted "on and on from California Street to Castro, for 15 minutes, and I'm not exaggerating."

Another rider, Pat Skala, was so disgusted by the driver's abuse she gave Campos her business card to verify his complaint. Skala, an information systems manager in the San Francisco Health Department, confirmed Campos's story to the B.A.R., and said she was concerned about the driver's mental health. "I think the man should be removed," she said. "I think he's a danger to himself and others."

Campos isn't so sure about that. "I don't think he's crazy," he said. "I just think he's totally prejudiced."

Whatever the reason for the driver's outburst, Supervisor Tom Ammiano said he would discuss the situation with Muni representatives with a specific outcome in mind. "We have to get this guy fired," he told the B.A.R.

Lester Olmstead-Rose of Community United Against Violence said CUAV will meet with Muni soon to discuss past problems of homophobic drivers, and to provide training to new employees in hopes of preventing future incidents. "It's actually something we wanted to do for some time, and Tom Ammiano was great about getting this moving," he said.

"Muni has been very open to this discussion, and we're moving forward with training."

Olmstead-Rose was reluctant to speculate that Sunday's incident was related to or prompted by the recent probation of a Muni driver charged with assaulting a passenger last year. [See related story, above.] Even so, he said, "In my mind, I think Muni has a responsibility around that [prior] incident. I would hope part of their response is to look at what resources they provide to their drivers. Like any organization, they have a responsibility to provide good resources, customer service training, and services to ensure these things don't happen."

"If they do happen, then discipline is called for." ▼

Bus bashers, birthday bashes

It's rather disturbing to find out hate crimes are more acceptable in San Francisco than in North Carolina. Without meaning to offend our friends from the south, the perception has always been that we are more tolerant here — tolerant, that is, of just about everything but intolerance. This is the place, supposedly, that can handle people whose prejudices are larger than their brains. Unfortunately, a couple of recent court decisions show that is not always the case.

Last week, shortly after a North Carolina jury found a skinhead ex-soldier named James Burmeister guilty of murdering people just because they happened to be black — and found him guilty so swiftly and decisively it helped soothe some of that O.J. Simpson irritation — a San Francisco judge suggested probation for Muni driver Wardy Joubert, who assaulted a passenger just because he happened to be gay. It's an outrage.

Obviously, there are differences in the two cases: Burmeister shot people to death; Joubert pummeled his victim, but left him alive. Burmeister also planned his attacks, whereas Joubert was just followed a sudden evil urge. Considering the differences, different sentences are obviously called for. Nobody is suggesting Joubert spend the rest of his life behind bars, but probation for his heinous crime is not acceptable in any way.

Part of the problem is that the judge in Joubert's case, John Berman, was a temp. These days special programs are needed to help move things along through the clogged courts, one of which brings retired judges like Berman back to the bench to hear cases. In this case — as in a lot of others, we suspect — it turned out to be a fiasco.

Berman's action reinforces the ideas that gay and lesbian victims are to blame for their problems, or that their injuries are somehow less injurious. That's the way people in the Deep South once perceived African-American victims, and it's encouraging to see in Burmeister's case the prevailing mood has changed; we are very disappointed to find such appalling lack of awareness here.

Education is clearly the key to change. Although it is too late to do anything about Joubert's case, we hope that Berman has noticed the furious reaction to his decision and that he thinks more clearly before he suggests such a thing again. But even more important is education at Muni. Three days after Joubert got probation, passengers charged another Muni driver with being homophobic and abusive (verbally, rather than physically, and while that's better, it still isn't good). Joubert's probation probably didn't prompt the latest incident, but it certainly didn't discourage it in any way, either.

Muni has met with Community United Against Violence, recognizing that there are problems with employee bigotry. We hope CUAV is able to get the situation in hand, and quickly. Gay and lesbian riders, who after all pay the same fare as everyone else, deserve the same courtesy and ought to be secure in the knowledge they don't have to fear drivers.

A new topic: Newly-released statistics show what most gay people have noticed for some time: AIDS mortality is dropping. Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala promptly made an ass of herself, bragging her head off on camera. Her statements about this Administration's "commitment... paying off" made it sound as though protease inhibitors were created from a Shalala family recipe, whipped up and boiled down by Bill and Hill's own hands — and if she had made that assertion it wouldn't, frankly, have sounded any less absurd than her claim about this notoriously uncommitted Administration's "commitment."

If anyone deserves credit, we'd say it is the people of ACT UP, and the people who have supported their work in the ten years since the group was formed. We are lucky and proud to have ACT UP/Golden Gate working for people with AIDS here in San Francisco (with benefits evident for people around the world). They have pressed for more pharmaceutical research, and more access to people who might otherwise be priced out of the market for lifesaving drugs. They, not Shalala, have saved lives.

This Monday, March 10, ACT UP/Golden Gate (which is not affiliated in any way with the group that calls itself ACT UP/San Francisco) will be marking the birthday with a spaghetti feed fundraiser. We'll be there, and we expect to see most of the people we know. Whether you are on the new life-extending medicines, or only know people whose drugs have returned their futures to them, you owe a lot to ACT UP — certainly more than the ten bucks it costs to attend the benefit dinner. Since everyone can't possibly be there, signed notes from your mother won't be necessary to get excused. But a nice check made out to the group would be very helpful. Send it to ACT UP/Golden Gate, 519 Castro Street, Box 93, San Francisco CA 94114. Otherwise, we'll see you there. ▼

Sex club inspector needs inspecting

by Edward B. Goehring

I am shocked to hear that Building Inspector Rafael Torres-Gil would be involved in the inspections of sex clubs being organized by the Health Department. I was present in Judge Cahill's court on November 15 when Mr. Torres-Gil told the court that it was imperative that the judge effectively close the Power Exchange sex club at 74 Otis immediately because it was unsafe. Mr. Torres-Gil claimed that there had been numerous safety problems in the club for over a year, including "electrical equipment blocking fire exits" (during a subsequent inspection this "electrical equipment" turned out to be a small water cooler in a corner of a hallway).

Mr. Torres-Gil couldn't explain to the judge why the ongoing problem was suddenly so critical, except to assert that there was a large event scheduled there for the upcoming weekend. Torres-Gil said that the city would be liable if there were a disaster at this big event.

To support his contention that the building was unsafe, Torres-Gil stated that the building at 74 Otis was built of unreinforced masonry, although it turns out that no tests of the building had been performed to determine this. It also turns out that the club that Mr. Torres-Gil claimed had been operating in spite of safety violations for well over a year has only been in business for a few months and has never heard about Mr. Torres-Gil's apparent feud with the former tenant.

Mr. Torres-Gil supplied the court with other misinformation, stating that there were no records to indicate that 74 Otis had ever held anything like a thousand occupants when Pac Bell owned the building (as the present owner claimed). The owner of the building promptly produced copies of Building Department records showing an occupancy of nearly a thousand.

During a recess in court Mr. Torres-Gil sat next to me, and I asked him where he had gotten the information that there was a big event planned for the weekend. He replied that he "couldn't recall where" he'd heard about the event. "Maybe I heard it from the police," was his next guess.

I pointed out that he had just asked a Municipal Court Judge to close a man's business indefinitely based on "facts" whose source he "couldn't remember" or wasn't sure of. He replied, "I guess I did."

I informed him that there was no event such as he had described (I had met with the owner of Power Exchange a few days previously and had seen his events calendar, which showed only a private fundraiser event for 30 people on the weekend in question). Torres-Gil made no move to inform either the judge or the Deputy City Attorney bringing the action against 74 Otis that his statement was false or even in question. This conversation, in which he shrugged off giving false information to the court, was witnessed by numerous people in the courtroom.

According to some sources in the Building Department, Inspector Rafael Torres-Gil is pushing to close all the sex clubs on technical grounds.

For additional details on his past activities I would refer you to the owner of Daddy's bar in the Castro, Building Commissioner Jaimie Sonbanmatsu, Mike Housh at Ammiano's office, and Dean Goodwin at the Mayor's office.

I believe Mr. Torres-Gil is using his official position to advance his homophobic personal agenda. Given his record, his involvement in efforts directed at mostly-gay sex clubs is an outrage that needs to be addressed promptly. ▼

Bombed by the Far Wrong

Which large group hates abortion clinics and queers and feminist womyn?

It's not "straight males" as a class — rather, it's the highly-organized minority who worked overtime to defeat ERA: the "theo-fascists," allegedly Christian, who twist the cross into a swastika. (Note: These killers don't represent most Christians, any more than J. Edgar Hoover represented most of my fellow fags.)

But the big question isn't "Whodunit?" The big one, a definite brain-strainer, is "How can we best resist?" Two possibilities: A) Queer papers could interview public-safety advocates who want to make bomb materials easier to trace. B) Lavender groups could seek alliances with birth-control and abortion providers, since we and they both receive bombs and bullets from the Far Wrong.

Excellent forum on sex clubs

I want to publicly thank the Stop AIDS Project for hosting an excellent community forum on the topic of sex clubs and bathhouses this past Saturday. The heavily attended forum was superbly organized, well-moderated, and promoted with skill and sensitivity.

Now let us hope that the message sent loud and clear by the gay community members attending that forum reaches the ears of Dr. Katz and the city's AIDS Office — halt the ban on private spaces in our city's sex establishments and re-focus on HIV prevention education, not on controlling and policing the sex lives of San Francisco's gay men.

PEP talk

I found your recent series on PEP [post-exposure prophylaxis] most interesting and timely, and would like to add my thoughts:

First it was about private spaces, now it is about the "morning after" pill (post-exposure prophylaxis). Not surprisingly, Stop AIDS and the DPH's AIDS Office were quick to re-establish their all-too-familiar paternalistic and authoritarian positions. Their immediate responses of "now these queens will have even more unsafe sex than before" is tired, insulting, condescending, and disempowering — scarcely a useful foundation for education or cooperation. As Don Howard so capably pointed out, their entire approach is all-too-obviously based on the notion that we gay people are too irresponsible to manage our own sexual activities and that we need these self-styled "experts" to observe, direct, and control us.

Probably the clearest parallel to this perspective is our country's historical approach to unplanned teenage pregnancy (which also stems from unprotected sex and which also creates financial and health problems for the involved individuals and society at large). How well have logical, moral, or religious arguments, threats, fears, taboos, ignorance, and adult "supervision" worked in pregnancy control? Attempts to chaperon (monitor) all opposite-gender activities; to scare kids with stories about STDs, broken hearts, and the "shame" of pregnancy; to keep them ignorant about their own bodies and feelings and power; to make birth control and abortion difficult to obtain — these have brought us to now celebrate the highest rate of unplanned teen pregnancy in the industrialized world. There is no reason to believe that using this same bankrupt and outmoded strategy to "prevent AIDS" will work any better. Katz seems to suggest even further that PEP, once an effective protocol is established, be provided only for those who promise "never to do it again." Would he withhold PEP treatment from someone who is not "repentant?"

If the goal of Stop AIDS and the AIDS Project is actually to minimize HIV seroconversion, these agencies would be wise to laud and support the possibility of developing an effective PEP and would be using a risk-management/harm-reduction model that has a possibility of increasing the effectiveness of prevention and education programs, rather than the moralistic, unrealistic, and reactionary "zero-tolerance" posture where they seem to be stuck. It is counterproductive, high-handed, alienating, and ineffectual for "big brother" in the guise of any agency to attempt to control the sex lives of its citizens by spying on them and otherwise attempting to limit their privacy, withholding medical information and treatment, keeping them ignorant of scientific data by providing only agency conclusions, and consistently insulting and demeaning citizens' judgment and sense of responsibility — all the while spending these same citizens' tax money to do so. Enough!

Positive reinforcement

[The following is an open letter to the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and the Stop AIDS Project.]

Over the years, thousands of us have contributed time and money to support your efforts to stop the spread of the HIV virus. We have learned much from your educational and outreach activities, and we now know that most unsafe sex occurs in private homes.

Now, the San Francisco Department of Public Health (SFPDH) is proposing regulations that require monitoring of gay men's sexual behavior in sex clubs and prevent establishments from providing private spaces. What is your organization's official position with respect to these regulations?

Most successful behavior modification approaches emphasize positive reinforcement, self-respect and individual responsibility. Why then is the SFPDH proposing regulations affecting gay men that focus on negative reinforcement: monitoring, lack of trust, lack of self-respect, and absence of personal responsibility? By restricting the locations of our bedrooms, are we really reaching out to the very sexually active people who may need our services most? Wouldn't we be more successful by reaching out to men in a bathhouse setting and seizing the opportunity to educate and empower them to navigate safely in private spaces?

Are there any studies that indicate that the policing of people's sexual activity has any significant impact in lowering the spread of the HIV virus? Has prohibition ever produced meaningful results? As our community continues its battle with the HIV virus, we should carefully review how we donate our limited resources of volunteer time and dollars, and continue to support organizations that provide sex education in an accurate, understandable, effective, sex positive, and non-judgmental manner to as many people as possible.

Is your mission one of education and personal empowerment or one of monitoring and policing? I request that the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and the Stop AIDS Project publicly respond to the SFPDH-proposed regulations policing gay men's sexual behavior.

Cross of iron

In a speech last month (January 1997) before the Congressional Progressive Caucus, Congressman Ron Dellums described the fallacies of our national-security state. Congressman Dellums declared that $200 billion should be cut from our military-industrial complex. The B2 bomber, designed for the Cold War, is obsolete. The 600 new fighters for the Air Force are not needed, nor does the Navy require — at enormous cost — additional carrier task-force systems. The Russians have cut down their military-industrial complex by 80%. We should now initiate, with Russian assistance, the START III talks in order to reduce stockpiles of nuclear weapons.

In its 1997 analysis of the current U.S. war budget, the War Resisters League, a peace organization based in New York, points out that the price tag for the Navy's LHD-7 amphibious assault ship is an astounding $1,300 million. Decades ago, President Dwight D. Eisenhower issued his famous warning:

"Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed... This is not a way of life at all in any true sense. Under the cloud of threatening war, it is humanity hanging from a cross of iron."

Men's club

If Wayne Friday is right — and seldom is he wrong — it looks like the East Bay's Demo Congressman Ellen Tauscher, who recently defeated the gentlemanly Republican Bill Baker, may face 49er tight end Brent Jones in 1998. It matters not to me that, as Friday notes, Jones is "a conservative, evangelical Christian." What counts is that he is both Republican and a man!

At the risk of being called a misogynist, it is about time that government at all levels be turned over to those most capable of governing — men (and GOP dudes at that).

Women make excellent teachers, scientists, physicians, journalists, editors, druggists and cookie-bakers. But, when it comes to government (and its adjuncts including the bench and the criminal justice system), well, let men do the jobs for which they are by nature suited (and this includes the military). Go for it, Jones!

Poetic license plate

The other night on Highway 680, I spotted somebody deserving of a mention in the B.A.R. It was a new pickup with the name "Big Ed" on the tailgate. The license plate frame read "BLOW ME THEN LEAVE." Big Ed, where are you?

Halloween production notes

I must take some issue with the article about CUAV and Halloween that began on page 5 of today's [Feb. 13] B.A.R. In the third to last paragraph on page 11, you state that CUAV began patrolling the street in 1990 to secure the safety of the participants, and that the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, Inc. (SPI,I) started providing entertainment the following year in association with CUAV. This is incorrect. In 1991 SPI,I not only produced the entertainment, but in actuality produced the whole event, from obtaining the street closure permit to securing the porta-potties. The only thing CUAV provided was a yearly stipend of seed money, that the Chorus also provided. The majority of the initial funds came from the Sisters. CUAV also provided security for the event.

However, in the last year that SPI,I produced the event, CUAV, who had agreed to provide 150-200 security volunteers, only had 5-10 people show up. Those that did show up told many of us that the "powers-that-be" at CUAV had told them since they were unable to secure all of the volunteers needed, that they would not guarantee the safety of the volunteers that decided to show up anyway. This was the last year that SPI,I agreed to produce the event. We are a group based on democratic principals, and as a result the majority of the members themselves no longer felt safe attending or producing the event.

It is not surprising to this Nun that CUAV lost money this year. What is surprising to me is that a group dedicated to preventing violence against members of our community would agree to create a function that was very clearly pushed as a heterosexual alternative to the Castro Halloween Celebration. Rather than trying to herd all of "them" up in one location, wouldn't it be more respectful to our community to demand protection and safety from the group that is charged with that duty, the San Francisco Police Department?

The last year that SPI,I produced the Halloween event, not only did CUAV fail in its commitment to our community, but so did the San Francisco Police Department. The strike against the San Francisco Newspaper Agency was to start at midnight that same night, and we heard from several officers that a department decision had been made to cover that event instead of the Castro Halloween Celebration. The few police I personally saw patrolling the streets were doing the best job they could, but with close to 450,000 people and only a handful of officers, it was ludicrous to think that violence would not occur. Several of my Sisters who were working the gates that evening were subjected to homophobic violence.

Enough of my ranting. But, perhaps as a condition of a "bail out" by the city, CUAV should agree that they are not an entertainment production company and agree to step out of the picture.

Asking for clarification

Some of your readers have expressed their displeasure with a B.A.R. article which refers to Steve Peskind as a Buddhist leader, and in which Mr. Peskind calls on the Dalai Lama to address the issue of homosexuality. I have no doubt that Mr. Peskind did not ask to be called a Buddhist leader. In fact, I am quite certain that such a title makes him feel uncomfortable. But the fact remains that over the years, Mr. Peskind has played an important role in American Buddhism, particularly in his commendable work as a caregiver.

Mr. Peskind has shown leadership, as well as compassion, by co-founding Coming Home Hospice, the Shanti Project, several service organizations in Orange County, and the Buddhist AIDS Project. He is also currently teaching Buddhist classes on dying and preparing an important Buddhist anthology.

Believing that harm will arise from a recent Buddhist publication (Beyond Dogma) which proscribes homosexual acts, Mr. Peskind has asked the Dalai Lama for clarification on the issue. Mr. Peskind was not the first to ask for such clarification; it has been sought repeatedly since 1993. By raising the issue once again, however, Mr. Peskind clearly hopes to stop the harmful effects of Beyond Dogma. That is precisely the action one would expect from a man who is fulfilling his Bodhisattva vows.

To his credit, Mr. Peskind has asked for the Dalai Lama's comments respectfully, with kindness and good intention, and I think he should be thanked for it.

Rainbow over Argentina

We want to inform you about some things of our organization, and we would like you to publish it in your newspaper.

Our name is Colectivo Arco Iris (Rainbow Collective). We work on sexuality, AIDS, and discrimination based in sexual orientation.

In these three years of existence we have been helped always by the gay community of San Francisco, we always remember that.

We also want to emphasize our relations with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, and the International Lesbian and Gay Human Rights Commission, specially Mrs. Mirka Negroni. And don't want to forget the assistance of many years from Mr. Horacio Maiorana.

We still need all the help in all the ways that anyone can give to us. We often do all kind of activities to get money, but our resources are always limited.

So our address is: Presidente Roca 663/ 2000 Rosario/ ARGENTINA, and our phone/fax number: 041 (código de área) 470268.

We live in a country of the third world, so the changes here are very slow, but we are making some real and definitive changes in the life of our gay/lesbian community.

Thank you very much, and we are here for what you would need.

Mini-Maoist vs. Mickey Maoist

A response to Beth Elliott and her B.A.R. column "Sapphistication" of Thursday, February 6, 1997, entitled "Mickey Maoist Club."

Ahh, imagine my delight at the betrayal of your ignorance writ large in verbiage. Thank you for your unconscious disclosure of late. It's truly marvelous to inform such an intense sensory leakage.

Had you a shred of insight into the history, or better yet, scholarship of classes and struggle for class revolution you might have veered from the mistake of popular right wing semantics and conclusions expressed in your column.

When you wrote "politically incorrect," one could presuppose you'd been referring to the CIA and its death squads around the world. No ... you targeted dyke women, predominantly poor women, women working to obtain greater share for women in political, economic and social spheres; those "politically incorrect" folks.

I thought you identified as female, Beth. I must have been mistaken. I'll correct that anomaly in future.

Could you benefit from taking the necessary time researching how the working class secured the eight-hour workday? Are your ancestors among the 40,000 women, children and men who died fighting for your eight-hour day, Beth? Have you ever encountered one of those brave souls standing up to union gangsters; union thugs who thought red-baiting was a form of sport terminated with gunfire ... or do you simply relish the deception of red-baiting lesbians?

When you finally look up from the page, recognize any desire for laissez-faire 18th century American Capitalism could only infuse the incipient birthing of the largest imperialist nation in the history of the world. So much for "merit and excellence." Better to acknowledge consciousness of class and realize the theft and rape of a world by your heroes. Elliott, next time be really brave and live the life in the underclass instead of as an entitled white boy, a lifestyle you're oh so busy maintaining, fortifying and championing.

I used to think someone who'd lived as "male" could don the cloak of "woman" coupled with the belief one is woman and through time, with enough listening, be accepted as a member of the culture of women. How ludicrous. Elliott proves the folly of such thought. To be accepted by dyke women one must respect dykes, listen to dykes, learn and use the language of dykes. Elliott is a transsexual ranting and raving against women at every turn of phrase and publicly licks the would-be wounds supposedly inflicted by a slandered feminism. Is Elliott's defamation of radical women any different from a screaming male chimp tearing up the jungle impetuously demanding to be recognized for what he is?

Beth, you've failed to understand the culture of women all these years after your transition from "male" to ... "approximate-female." You're still castigating women for your lack of social awareness, training and capacity. You find it easier to blame women who desperately need to be identified with, women who find your behavior repugnant. Elliott ... you embody the consummate importance of a pre-adolescent male impressed with baseball, babes, and beer more than a soul concerned with kinship and ... women of a dyke caste.

Happy Trails ...

POLITICS

Motel Sixteen Hundred

by Wayne Friday

Is there no end to the continuing revelations about Bill Clinton using the Lincoln Bedroom (sleep-overs), Air Force One, the Blue Room (coffee and pastries), the Oval Office, etc. to raise big bucks for the Democratic Party, not to mention his own recent re-election? Hey, both parties know no boundaries when it comes to raising money for campaigns, but Clinton seems to have broken new ground in cashing in on his incumbent status.

Not that The Man From Hope is the first president to reward big-buck supporters with a White House Bed and Breakfast stay — far from it. As for the famed Lincoln Bedroom (which apparently needed to be restocked after Willie Brown slept there), the fact is that Abe Lincoln never slept there (his wife did buy the furniture, however), but did sign the Emancipation Proclamation in that room in 1863. Yet being invited to sleep in the so-called "Lincoln Bedroom" seems to be the high point of a White House sleep-over.

And besides, Winston Churchill did sleep there, and for my money, that is as good as having had Mary Todd and Honest Abe doing the wild thing behind its doors.

Seriously, the unending stories of President Clinton actually making a list of $50,000 and $100,000 contributors ("overnighters" as the Prez refers to them) to be entertained at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. are beginning to make Bubba look a bit more like Richard M. Nixon (or Conrad Hilton) than his teen hero, John F. Kennedy. Maybe I'm just a bit jealous because Willie Brown and Frank Jordan have both slept in Abe's bed (on different nights, natch — Frank was with wife Wendy Paskin and not those two disc jockeys) and I haven't, but maybe my invite was lost in the mail. Besides, Mayor Brown complained that the bed was "not terribly comfortable, and you have to step up to get in." Da Mayor made up for these inconveniences by apparently taking everything that wasn't nailed down and could fit in his suitcase. (If Willie ever shows up at your abode with a steamer trunk, watch out!)

Though both Mayors Jordan and Brown claim they weren't strong-armed by Bubba and Co. for checks to the DNC for the honor of sleeping at Motel 1600, most who took part in the White House pajama parties were — sometimes to the tune of $250,000 per night. But many were more than happy to cough up the big bucks. As one deep-pockets overnighter put it, "It sure beats the hell out of the Holiday Inn." (Just watch out if they send Janet Reno around to evict you when you've overstayed your welcome!)

Even more stupid than this flagrant tackiness was leaving the smoking gun lying around: writing instructions in the president's own handwriting stating that the "honor" of staying overnight with Hillary and himself was to be given to those contributing "$50,000 to 100,000." Bill is getting careless now that he's in for a second term. You're becoming a bit sloppy, Mr. President, and more than a little avaricious. Don't let "The buck stops here" become your legacy to the country.

Politics and poker

The interesting political race locally this November will likely be that for city treasurer. Incumbent Mary Callanan will run again, and her main opponent will be former Supervisor Tom Hsieh. Supervisor Susan Leal has decided against joining the fray, and the city's Demo bigwigs will be split between Callanan and Hsieh — with Mayor Brown likely backing Hsieh, state Senator John Burton and Rep. Nancy Pelosi supporting Callanan, and other political heavyweights still to be heard from.

The most exclusive club in the world — living Democratic presidents — has only two members, and they barely speak to one another. Those in the know say that James Earl Carter and William Jefferson Clinton can't stand each other. Carter, a devout, upright Southern Baptist, is said to have lingering serious questions about Clinton's character (surprise!), and Clinton, the consummate politician, reportedly finds Carter overly rigid and sanctimonious (no!). Friends of both point out that Carter "missed" last year's Demo National Convention and Clinton's second inaugural in January.

Maine, a state where common-sense politics has always prevailed, has two openly homosexual statewide officials. Lesbian state Senator Dale McCormick (D) recently became state treasurer, joining openly gay state Auditor Ed Flanagan.

And for those who haven't already heard, Travis County, Texas (Austin area) recently elected Margo Frasier, a lawyer and former jail supervisor (and a well-known lesbian), as its first woman sheriff.

President Bill Clinton, after hearing the CDC report that for the first time since the AIDS pandemic began, deaths have declined 13% nationwide, declared, "This good news is further evidence that this terrible epidemic is beginning to yield to our sustained national public health investment in AIDS research, prevention and care. But we must not relax our efforts. We must remember that every person who is living with HIV or AIDS is someone's son or daughter, brother or sister, parent or grandparent."

Bad news for state Republicans: their new state chair, Michael Schroeder of Orange County, is apparently even more conservative than past chair John Herrington. Schroeder is heavily involved in the efforts of Bob Dornan to win back his congressional seat. This should give moderate Republicans an idea as to where Schroeder wants to take their party.

In Geneva last week, a delegation of gays and lesbians pressed Swiss officials to ensure that gays get some portion of a new $71 million humanitarian fund for needy victims of the Holocaust. The meeting in the Swiss capital, Berne, came the day after the Swiss government formally started the fund; any Holocaust victim can apply for a part of its proceeds.

Friends and supporters of DA Terence Hallinan will hold a St. Patrick's Day bash for the top prosecutor at the famed Dove Club on 18th St. on Thursday, March 13, to help retire Kayo's campaign debt. Enjoy lots of corn beef, Irish music, green beer, dancing, etc. ($25 at the door, 5:30-8 p.m., 681-2929 for more info.)

A homophobic state senator, Pete Knight (R-Palmdale), whose own son is gay, last week reintroduced legislation in Sacramento that would prevent California from recognizing same-sex marriages.

Richard Gordon, an openly gay candidate for the San Mateo County Board of Supes in next month's April 8 election, deserves the votes of all of our San Mateo readers.

Rep. Lynn Woolsey

The Quote of the Week is from a letter drafted by Marin Rep. Lynn Woolsey (D) to Defense Secretary William Cohen regarding the increased number of gays and lesbians forced out of the armed forces since "Don't ask, Don't tell" was instituted: "In your new position as Secretary of Defense, you have the authority to bring the 'don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue' policy back to its original intent to protect gays and lesbians from harassment and abuse; it is crucial that you make enforcement of the policy, including strong discipline for those who violate it, a top priority during your tenure."

The letter was signed by 36 other House members; Cohen has said publicly that he will "do everything I can to see that the rising harassment of gays and lesbians is stopped." The next move is yours, Mr. Secretary. ▼

The muck stops here

by Beth Elliott

You Must Be At Least This Short to Ride the Bitch Dept.: Here are some handy, helpful hints for those who want to write to the B.A.R. to trash this columnist. First, keep your screed to 500 words or less, no matter how badly I've pissed you off. Second, don't try to trash me in multiple papers with the same letter, or my editor will ignore you.

Third, make what you write comprehensible. If my editor can't figure out what you're saying, he's not going to print it. Reading the first version of the letter that prompted the foregoing (the second version is printed on page 7 ... if you care) I did get the personal insults — which were laughable and ineffective — and not much more.

Basically, this writer took great offense at the lack of reverence for Communism/ "class struggle" shown in my recent "Mickey Maoist Club" essay. I hadn't known some kind of belief in socialism of some form was a prerequisite for being a "real lesbian." I think that notion is a load of crap, and I'd like to take this opportunity to tell those trying to enforce that idea on other lesbians to sit on it and spin.

I said then that the lesbian movement's flirtation with Cultural Revolution-style enforcement of political orthodoxy, both during the political wars of the 1970s and the sex wars of the 1980s (hello, little letter-writer! These were both waged against you!), had stunted our community's growth. This letter proved my point. How many lesbians want to be part of a movement in which they can be trashed for concluding — correctly — they are at risk of personal attack for declining to convey moral title to their lives, property, and labor to any woman who claims entitlement to them?

Lazy tushes

This letter contained impassioned portrayals of Communists at the barricades, fighting for union labor conditions. So what? Many non-Communists fought those battles. I didn't see any Communists working with Jim Foster, Jeanne Cordova, myself et al. to get California's sodomy laws repealed. They were busy trying to take credit for our work. Or forging our organizations' endorsements on their "mass actions." Or sitting on their lazy tushes talking about how there would be no freedom for queers without socialist revolution — while countries that already had one were throwing us into psychiatric prisons.

The writer said it was too bad I didn't follow through on Mao's Little Red Book and make the revolution happen. Darn, I guess I missed out on some non-traditional career opportunities — I could have pointed one of those tanks at students in Tiananmen Square. What was I thinking? That a dictatorship of the proletariat is still a dictatorship?

My time could have been more productively spent fighting wars of orthodoxy. Collectivism, as advocated by people in Western-style democracies, is all about getting yourself defined as a member of one of the groups that deserves to have others subsidize it. One of those groups is those "pure" enough to know who's entitled to take and who's obligated to give. The more angry and indignant you act, the better you are as a person and therefore more "entitled," not only to the goodies but also the control of their distribution.

The other week, both the SF Weekly and the Bay Guardian ran cartoons grumbling about the IRS and paying taxes. In the case of the Guardian, this was the height of hypocrisy. Editor Tim Redmond has stated in print that "the purpose of government is to redistribute income." But when the government does the job he expects it to do, he complains. "No, I didn't mean redistribute my income!" — proof again that what Marxists really mean is, "From each according to your abilities, to each according to my needs."

Pierced progressives

If that's such a great idea, what's keeping these "progressives" from practicing it themselves? The cost of one facial piercing could feed and clothe an unwed high school drop-out's baby. The cost of a night at a dance club could house a homeless person for a night. The cost of one large color tattoo could feed an undocumented immigrant family for a month.

Writer Bruce Mirkin complained in a book review about a post-WWII PR campaign suggesting the individual was more important than the collective. If we owe it to other people to contribute to the best of our ability, what are these proto-Marxists doing sipping espresso in trendy cafes when they could be out working overtime to support their fellow proletarians? Hey, pull out those facial piercings, grow out your hair and let it revert to its natural color, and get a real job so you can redistribute your income! Put your money where your pierced mouth is.

Government is our paid servant. It's there to protect our life, liberty, and opportunity to pursue happiness, to protect us from force and fraud; we owe it the money it takes to fulfill that role for us. There's room in this framework to debate the parameters of that role — but not to establish, by force, collective ownership of any possession just because somebody else says they're "entitled" to it. Many people would be much more willing to "share" more of what they have if they believed, as many did during LBJ's "Great Society," that people would make use of opportunities offered. Entitlement culture disabuses them of that notion.

I end with two quotes: The first, from Prof. Maria Hsia Chang (U. of Nevada, Reno): "Mao's brand of socialism left China impoverished... His unceasing mass campaigns not only disrupted economic production but also fomented widespread strife. During the Cultural Revolution, China descended into a living hell of tribalism and a Hobbesian war of all against all." The second, from a review of a documentary on the 1970 Isle of Wight Festival: "It's ugly, it's seedy, and it demonstrates, as the Altamont rock festival had the previous fall, how easily the concepts of communalism and peace were undermined by a stupid, scuzzy fringe that thought being a hippie meant getting everything for free."

No, thank you. ▼

Sapphistication

13 years ago: Liberace and liberation

by David Bianco

This week in gay history: The "palimony" lawsuit against Liberace is thrown out of court March 1, 1984.

Undoubtedly the most flamboyant entertainer of the century, Wladziu Valentino Liberace was also one of the most fiercely closeted. On three separate occasions, the showman hired lawyers to help keep his homosexuality secret, each time defeating those who alleged that he was gay. The entertainer who absolutely reveled in gay stereotypes — from poodles to pink sequins — insisted on a heterosexual facade until the day he died of AIDS just over ten years ago.

Liberace first went to court to swear to his status as a red-blooded American male in 1956, when a columnist for the London Daily Mirror called him, among other things, a "fruit-flavored, mincing, ice-covered heap of mother love." Liberace sued for damages, and in the trial testified that his bachelor status was only temporary. "I am always looking around for a pretty girl to marry," he said under oath. "I have 12 proposals a month, and on Valentine's Day I got 27,000 Valentines."

This testimony came after more than a decade of sexual liaisons between Liberace and other men. But when Liberace was asked in court about his feelings towards homosexuality, he replied, "My feelings are the same as anyone else, sir. I am against this practice because it offends convention and it offends society."

William Connor, the columnist whose mockery of Liberace had occasioned the lawsuit, defended himself by denying that the column implied that Liberace was gay, even arguing that the words "fruit" and "fairy" only have gay connotations in America, but not in Britain. The jury did not believe him, and his publication was forced to pay more than $20,000 in damages. Liberace later wrote that he felt his manhood had been vindicated by the verdict.

A year later, the American scandal-mongering publication Confidential ran a cover story entitled, "Why Liberace's Theme Song Should be 'Mad About the Boy.'" Liberace sued, and the parties settled out of court, this time enriching the entertainer and his attorneys by $40,000.

Thirty years later, Liberace once again found himself in court defending himself against an accusation of homosexuality, this time in a "palimony" suit by his former chauffeur and lover, Scott Thorson. Thorson had met Liberace in 1977 when the younger man was 18 and the entertainer was more than three times his age. Liberace had invited a series of good-looking, blond young men into his many bedrooms in his many homes, but his relationship with Thorson was longer and by all accounts more devoted.

During their five-year relationship, Liberace showered Thorson with hundreds of gifts, investigated the possibility of legally adopting him, and paid for plastic surgery so the younger man could look more like his patron. Thorson's memoir describes Liberace as sexually ravenous, with a fondness for poppers, porno tapes, and multiple sex partners. Toward the end of their relationship, Thorson became increasingly dependent on cocaine, while Liberace increasingly had his eye on other young men.

In March 1982, Thorson was evicted from one of Liberace's apartments and given $75,000 in exchange for waiving future claims. But he soon argued that he had agreed under duress and was entitled to $113 million in damages because Liberace had promised to take care of all Thorson's financial needs in exchange for companionship and sex. Two years later, a Nevada judge threw Thorson's lawsuit out of court by holding that a "money for sex" arrangement was prostitution, which even in Nevada did not entitle Thorson to a permanent share of Liberace's income. Thorson's lawyers refused to drop the matter, though, and in 1986, Liberace agreed to a final payment of

There are a lot of "diamonds in the rough" for sale. Such a "diamond" may be in a great location, have large sunny rooms and a big yard, but may also have awful wall paper, old carpeting and uninspired bathrooms.

If you can look beyond the surface, you may see a house with incredible potential that could be transformed by a little "elbow grease", paint, and new carpets. If a house is structurally sound and all the systems are in good condition, it may be only a few cosmetic repairs from being fantastic! A home that does not show well is usually priced accordingly. If the price doesn't reflect the condition of the house, the seller may be more willing to negotiate than a seller who has made a considerable investment in preparing a home for the market.

'Positive Women, Positive Art' exhibit celebrates Women's Day

by Cynthia Laird

Pali Boucher is a Bay Area photographer who has channeled her energy into putting together an art show, even though she cheerfully admits she didn't know much about organizing one. Things have come together wonderfully for Boucher and the 11 other women whose art will be featured at the "Positive Women, Positive Art" exhibit and sale taking place Saturday, March 8 and Sunday, March 9 at The Women's Building in San Francisco. The weekend event also marks International Women's Day on Saturday and is just one event during Women's History Month.

A variety of art, including mixed media paintings, ceramics, jewelry, and dream catchers, will be on exhibit and available for purchase. Many of the women artists are HIV-positive, and several spoke of the need to give back something to their community—one that's often overlooked, at least to some extent, in news about the epidemic.

Boucher, who is HIV-positive, said she got the idea about four months ago.

"I was talking to my therapist, telling her that I was getting depressed making art and shoving it in my closet," Boucher told the B.A.R. "My therapist suggested having an art show, and it sounded like a good idea.

"It's been great. It's been really empowering and has helped me feel connected," she continued. "I can't believe how giving people are."

"Positive Women, Positive Art" is being co-sponsored by the Women's AIDS Network (WAN), Women Organized to Respond to Life-threatening Diseases (WORLD), and the Iris Center. It is free and open to the public. Refreshments, raffle prizes and other items are being donated by local businesses for the event.

The exhibit's other artists include Suzin Wisland, whose talent is mixed media paintings; Dolores Lucas, who specializes in making dream catchers; Marla Allen, Linda Peach, and Vive Jones, who will each have their unique handcrafted jewelry exhibited; Donna Smith, showing mixed media art; Carol Siporen, who specializes in watercolor art; and Dale Alexander, who will show paintings.

Elena Montez, who is active with the Names Project, will exhibit her handmade quilts. Boucher and Donna Haggerty will display their photographs.

On Saturday, Nancy LeMoines and Sharon Siskin will lead a mask-making workshop. Participants will have an opportunity to create brilliant, unique masks. LeMoines said there is a sliding scale donation between "zero and $10" to help offset the cost of materials.

The women are excited about this show, which many of them helped Boucher organize.

"I'm not HIV-positive, but all the addicts I know and used with are HIV-positive," Jones told the B.A.R. "I'm a pre- and post-HIV counselor."

Sonja Mackenzie, with WAN, credited Boucher in pulling everything together for the upcoming exhibit. "She's done an incredible job."

She also hopes "Positive Women, Positive Art" will increase visibility of women living with HIV. AIDS deaths among women are on the rise, despite recent news reports that heralded a decrease in deaths, Mackenzie said.

Sandi Luna, program coordinator at WORLD, said the most important thing is that women with HIV are getting a chance to express themselves. ▼

"Positive Women, Positive Art" will be held from 1 to 9 p.m. on Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The Women's Building is located at 3543 18th Street.

Music and poetry highlight International Women's Day, benefit women prisoners

by Cynthia Laird

Riotous performances by Riot Act Theatre and Rebecca Riots will kick off this year's International Women's Day celebration that will focus on the theme, "Women Prisoners Need Health Care," this Saturday, March 8 at the Women's Building in San Francisco.

Sponsored by the California Coalition for Women Prisoners, the evening will feature Lorna Aquino-Chui, a Riot Act Theatre still performer; music by Rebecca Riots, a Bay Area women's acoustic group; poetry by Chrystos, a Native American lesbian poet; a report from behind the walls; and a speak-out by formerly incarcerated women.

The event is wheelchair-accessible, and child care will be provided.

Judy Greenspan, of the coalition, said the International Women's Day event will highlight the class action lawsuit filed by women prisoners in California protesting medical neglect and charging abuse. The more than 10,000 women prisoners do not have access to adequate gynecological care, treatment for chronic diabetes, asthma, and lupus, appropriate cancer therapies, and HIV/AIDS infectious disease specialists. The lawsuit, Shumate v. Wilson, goes to trial in Sacramento in the spring, Greenspan said. ▼

The event begins at 7 p.m. at the Women's Building, located at 3543 18th Street. There is a donation of $10-25 per person, although no one will be turned away for lack of funds. For more information, call the California Coalition for Women Prisoners at (415) 255-7036, ext. 4 or (510) 834-5656, ext. 3150.

Inhibitor You Can Live With

Because treatment is a long-term commitment. Consider the good tolerability and convenience of INVIRASE. People treated with INVIRASE may have some side effects, but most are described as "mild." The ones seen most often are diarrhea (3.8%), abdominal discomfort (1.3%) and nausea (1.9%). INVIRASE can be taken with AZT (zidovudine, ZDV) or HIVID® (zalcitabine, ddC), and it will not make the side effects of these therapies any worse or better, or their occurrence any less or more frequent. INVIRASE can also be taken with lamivudine (3TC) without unexpected side effects.

INVIRASE dosing (three times a day with meals) is easy to remember and combines well with most antiretroviral regimens.

Because AIDS-free survival can be improved. In a long-term (18-month) trial, combination therapy with INVIRASE + HIVID was shown to significantly decrease the risk of death and disease progression compared to either agent alone in people who could no longer take AZT.

– Disease progression occurred in 51 of 308 patients with combination therapy vs 88 of 314 with HIVID alone and 84 of 318 with INVIRASE alone; mortality occurred in 11 of 308 patients with combination therapy vs 30 of 314 with HIVID alone and 40 of 318 with INVIRASE alone *

Because effective therapy should also be practical for everyday living. Ask your doctor how you can make INVIRASE part of your treatment strategy. And don't forget to ask about the Roche HIV Therapy Assistance Program...or call 1-800-282-7780 (in the Washington, DC metro area: 202-942-2437) for more information about this program.

INVIRASE® (saquinavir mesylate) Capsules 200 mg

Therapy You Can Live With

Before prescribing, please consult complete product information, a summary of which follows:

CONTRAINDICATIONS: INVIRASE is contraindicated in patients with clinically significant hypersensitivity to saquinavir or to any of the components contained in the capsule.

PRECAUTIONS: General: The safety profile of INVIRASE in children younger than 16 years has not been established.

If a serious or severe toxicity occurs during treatment with INVIRASE, INVIRASE should be interrupted until the etiology of the event is identified or the toxicity resolves. At that time, resumption of treatment with full dose INVIRASE may be considered. For nucleoside analogues used in combination with INVIRASE, physicians should refer to the complete product information for these drugs for dose adjustment recommendations and for information regarding drug-associated adverse reactions.

Caution should be exercised when administering INVIRASE to patients with hepatic insufficiency since patients with baseline liver function tests >5 times the upper limit of normal were not included in clinical studies.

Resistance/Cross-resistance: The potential for human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) cross-resistance between protease inhibitors has not been fully explored. Therefore, it is unknown what effect saquinavir therapy will have on the activity of subsequent protease inhibitors (see complete product information, CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY: Microbiology).

Information for Patients: Patients should be informed that INVIRASE is not a cure for HIV infection and that they may continue to acquire illnesses associated with advanced HIV infection, including opportunistic infections. Patients should be advised that INVIRASE should be used only in combination with an active nucleoside analogue regimen.

Patients should be told that the long-term effects of INVIRASE are unknown at this time. They should be informed that INVIRASE therapy has not been shown to reduce the risk of transmitting HIV to others through sexual contact or blood contamination. Patients should be advised that INVIRASE should be taken within 2 hours after a full meal (see complete product information, CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY: Pharmacokinetics). When INVIRASE is taken without food, concentrations of saquinavir in the blood are substantially reduced and may result in no antiviral activity.

Laboratory Tests: Clinical chemistry tests should be performed prior to initiating INVIRASE therapy and at appropriate intervals thereafter. For comprehensive information concerning laboratory test alterations associated with use of individual nucleoside analogues, physicians should refer to the complete product information for these drugs.

Drug Interactions: Metabolic Enzyme Inducers: INVIRASE should not be administered concomitantly with rifampin, since rifampin decreases saquinavir concentrations by 80% (see complete product information, CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY: Pharmacokinetics). Rifabutin also substantially reduces saquinavir plasma concentrations by 40%. Other drugs that induce CYP3A4 (e.g., phenobarbital, phenytoin, diazepam, carbamazepine) may also reduce saquinavir plasma concentrations. If therapy with such drugs is warranted, physicians should consider using alternatives when a patient is taking INVIRASE.

Other Potential Interactions: Concomitant administration of terfenadine, astemizole or cisapride with drugs that are known to be potent inhibitors of the cytochrome P4503A pathway (e.g., ketoconazole, itraconazole, etc.) may lead to elevated plasma concentrations of terfenadine, astemizole or cisapride, which may in turn prolong QT intervals leading to rare cases of serious cardiovascular adverse events. Although INVIRASE is not a strong inhibitor of cytochrome P4503A, pharmacokinetic interaction studies with INVIRASE and terfenadine, astemizole or cisapride have not been conducted. Physicians should use alternatives to terfenadine, astemizole or cisapride when a patient is taking INVIRASE. Other compounds that are substrates of CYP3A4 (e.g., calcium channel blockers, diltiazem, dapsone, quercetin, triazolam) may have elevated plasma concentrations when coadministered with INVIRASE; therefore, patients should be monitored for toxicities associated with such drugs.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis and Impairment of Fertility: Carcinogenesis: Carcinogenicity studies in rats and mice have not yet been completed.

Mutagenesis: Mutagenicity and genotoxicity studies, with and without metabolic activation where appropriate, have shown that saquinavir has no mutagenic activity in vitro or bacterial (Ames test) or mammalian cells (Chinese hamster lung V79/HPT test). Saquinavir does not induce chromosomal damage in the mouse micronucleus assay or in vitro in human peripheral blood lymphocytes, and does not induce primary DNA damage in vitro in the unscheduled DNA synthesis test.

Impairment of Fertility: Fertility and reproductive performance were not affected in rats at plasma exposures (AUC values) up to five times those achieved in humans at the recommended dose.

Pharmacology: Reproductive Effects: Category B. Reproduction studies conducted with saquinavir in rats have shown no embryotoxicity or teratogenicity at plasma exposures (AUC values) up to five times those achieved in humans at the recommended dose or in rabbits at plasma exposures four times those achieved at the recommended clinical dose. Studies in rats indicated that exposure to saquinavir from late pregnancy through lactation at plasma concentrations (AUC values) up to five times those achieved in humans at the recommended dose had no effect on the survival, growth and development of offspring to weaning. Because animal reproduction studies are not always predictive of human response, INVIRASE should be used during pregnancy after taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother. Presently, there are no reports of infants being born after women receiving INVIRASE in clinical trials became pregnant.

Nursing Mothers: The US Public Health Service Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advises HIV-infected women not to breastfeed to avoid potential transmission of HIV to a child who may not yet be infected. It is not known whether INVIRASE is excreted in human milk.

Pediatric Use: Safety and effectiveness of INVIRASE in HIV-infected children or adolescents younger than 16 years of age have not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONS (see PRECAUTIONS): The safety of INVIRASE was studied in 688 patients who received the drug either alone or in combination with zalcitabine (ZDV) and/or ddC (zalcitabine, ddC). The majority of adverse events were of mild intensity. The most frequently reported adverse events among patients receiving INVIRASE (excluding those toxicities known to be associated with ZDV and ddC when used in combinations) were diarrhea, abdominal discomfort and nausea.

INVIRASE did not alter the pattern, frequency or severity of known major toxicities associated with the use of ddC and/or ZDV. Physicians should refer to the complete product information for these drugs (or other antiretroviral agents as appropriate) for drug-associated adverse reactions to other nucleoside analogues.

In an open-label protocol, NV14256, in which 33 patients received treatment with INVIRASE, ZDV and lamivudine for 4 to 16 weeks, no unexpected toxicities were reported.

Table A lists clinical adverse events that occurred in ≥2% of patients receiving INVIRASE 600 mg bid alone or in combination with ZDV and/or ddC in two trials. Median duration of treatment in NV14255/ACTG229 (triple-combination study) was 48 weeks; median duration of treatment among the surrogate analyses cohort analyzed for safety (n=451) in NV14256 was 42 weeks.

Rare occurrences of the following serious adverse experiences have been reported during clinical trials of INVIRASE and were considered at least possibly related to use of study drugs: confusion, ataxia and weakness; acute myeloblastic leukemia; hemolytic anemia; attempted suicide; Stevens-Johnson syndrome; seizures; severe cutaneous reaction associated with increased liver function tests; isolated elevation of transaminases; thrombophlebitis; headache; thrombocytopenia; exacerbation of chronic liver disease with Grade 4 elevated liver function tests; jaundice, ascites, and right and left upper quadrant abdominal pain; drug fever; pancreatitis leading to death; nephrolithiasis; thrombocytopenia and intracranial hemorrhage leading to death; peripheral vasoconstriction; intestinal obstruction. These events were reported from a database of >6000 patients. Over 100 patients on saquinavir therapy have been followed for >2 years.

*Marked Laboratory Abnormality defined as a shift from Grade 0 to at least Grade 3 or from Grade 1 to Grade 4 (ACTG Grading System). Mouth and Throat: Other clinical adverse experiences of any intensity, at least remotely related to INVIRASE, including those in <2% of patients on arms containing INVIRASE in studies NV14255/ACTG229 and NV14256, and those in smaller clinical trials, are listed below by body system.

Body as a Whole: Allergic reaction, chest pain, edema, fever, intoxication, parasites external, retrosternal pain, shivering, wasting syndrome, weight decrease.

Cardiovascular: Cyanosis, heart murmur, heart valve disorder, hypertension, hypotension, syncope, vein distended.

Endocrine/Metabolic: Dehydration, dry eye syndrome, hyperglycemia, weight increase, xanthopsia.

Gastrointestinal: Chelitis, constipation, dysphagia, eructation, feces bloodstained, feces discolored, gastritis, gastritis, gastrointestinal inflammation, gingivitis, glossitis, hemorrhage rectum, hemorrhoids, hepatomegaly, hepatosplenomegaly, melena, pain pelvic, painful defecation, pancreatitis, period disorder, salivary glands disorder, stomatitis, tooth disorder, vomiting.

Hematologic: Anemia, microcytomerphages, pancytopenia, splenomegaly, thrombocytopenia.

Musculoskeletal: Arthralgia, arthritis, back pain, cramps muscle, musculoskeletal disorders, stiffness, tissue changes, trauma.

Neurological: Ataxia, bowel movements frequent, confusion, convulsions, dysarthria, dysesthesia, heart rate disorder, hyperesthesia, hyperreflexia, hyporeflexia, mouth dry, numbness face, pain facial, paresis, polyomyelitis, progressive multifocal leukoencephalopathy, spasms, tremor.

Psychological: Agitation, amnesia, anxiety, depression, dreaming excessive, euphoria, hallucination, insomnia, intellectual ability reduced, irritability, lethargy, libido disorder, overdose effect, psychic disorder, somnolence, speech disorder.

Reproductive System: Prostate enlarged, vaginal discharge.

Resistance Mechanism: Abscess, angina tonsillaris, candidiasis, hepatitis, herpes simplex, herpes zoster, infection bacterial, infection mycotic, infection staphylococcal, influenza, lymphadenopathy, tumor.

Respiratory: Bronchitis, cough, dyspnea, epistaxis, hemoptysis, laryngitis, pharyngitis, pneumonia, respiratory disorder, rhinitis, sinusitis, upper respiratory tract infection.

Skin and Appendages: Acne, dermatitis, dermatitis seborrheic, eczema, erythema, folliculitis, furunculosis, hair changes, hot flushes, photosensitivity reaction, pigment changes skin, rash maculopapular, skin disorder, skin nodule, skin ulceration, sweating increased, urticaria, verruca, xeroderma.

Special Senses: Blepharitis, earache, ear pressure, eye irritation, hearing decreased, otitis, taste alteration, tinnitus, visual disturbance.

Urinary System: Micturition disorder, urinary tract infection.

OVERDOSEAGE: No acute toxicities or sequelae were noted in 1 patient who ingested 8 grams of INVIRASE as a single dose. The patient was treated with induction of emesis within 2 to 4 hours after ingestion. In an exploratory Phase 2 study of oral dosing with INVIRASE at 7200 mg/day (1200 mg q4h), there were no serious toxicities reported through the first 25 weeks of treatment.

HOW SUPPLIED: INVIRASE 200-mg capsules are light brown and green opaque capsules with ROCHE and Q245 imprinted on the capsule shell; bottles of 270 (NDC 0204-0245-15).

The capsules should be stored at 59° to 86°F (15° to 30°C) in tightly closed bottles.

AIDS Office clarifies position on condoms

Five clubs already provide them all the time

by Cynthia Laird

In two interviews with the Bay Area Reporter, AIDS Office Director Dr. Mitch Katz has clarified the Department of Public Health's (DPH) position on widespread condom distribution in gay bars. He has also acknowledged that while rubbers should not be viewed as the only means of preventing HIV infection, they are one important part of prevention strategy and they will be provided to "any site that wants them."

The AIDS Office director said some DPH information has not been correctly stated. "All we're trying to say is that condoms alone are not really very powerful intervention," he reiterated. "Condoms are one important part of prevention strategy that needs to be combined with other interventions."

Part of the problem with rubbers, he said, is that men who are drunk or high at a bar tend not to think much about condoms. Another issue is that a remarkable number of people don't like them. "Acceptability of condoms is a bigger issue than accessibility," he said, adding, "I don't want anyone to think I'm against condoms. As much as we're doing on HIV prevention, we're not doing enough."

Some community activists have been advocating for free condoms in all the bars all of the time, and not just during pride festivities in June.

Politicians have also raised the issue. Supervisor Leslie Katz has requested information on condom distribution from Health Director Dr. Sandra Hernandez at the board's Health, Family, and Environment Committee hearing this Thursday, March 13. The hearing is open to the public.

Over four months ago, Supervisor Katz asked for a widespread condom distribution plan. Since last October, she has received letters from Hernandez that outline the city's current condom programs, as well as some information about a broader plan that would target 230 bars that serve primarily gay male clientele or others at high risk for HIV.

"We've talked with Leslie Katz's office and provided a plan. She asked for information on what the AIDS Office does currently and the cost. We provided that," Dr. Katz said. "We had to find out the total number of bars that serve persons at high risk for HIV. It's not my perception that there has been any delay, other than the delay to get accurate information."

The cost for a distribution program targeting 230 bars would be $150,000, according to Hernandez.

Based on that information, and $15,000 in prevention funds for Stop AIDS Project's condom program that starts in July, Supervisor Katz estimates it will cost an additional $130,000 to get latex in all the bars next year. She wants DPH to request the money for that as part of the department's 1997-98 budget.

Last month, Hernandez told the B.A.R. that all of the DPH's data indicate people have unsafe sex for a lot of reasons, but lack of condom availability isn't one of them.

Dr. Mitch Katz

One person showed

Marcy Fraser, an AIDS Office staff person, wrote to bar owners twice last summer. The first letter outlined the office's "Liberty and Latex for All" campaign during pride week. She said the response from bar owners was overwhelmingly positive.

"No one turned us away," said Fraser, adding they all seemed "more than happy" to distribute the condoms to customers.

Fraser's second letter, sent to the 52 gay bars last July, addressed ongoing condom distribution. A meeting was held on August 6; only one person attended besides staff, Fraser said. She pointed out, however, that only two bar owners responded to the letter. Hernandez also noted the low response in a letter to Supervisor Katz.

Staff at the Stop AIDS Project questioned the low number of respondents.

"That hasn't been our experience," Patrick Barresi told the B.A.R. "We've found bars to be receptive to taking them."

Dan Wohlfeiler said the agency has been working with bar owners regularly. The outreach includes spending time with bar owners to find out what might make them resistant to condom distribution such as placing condom baskets behind the counter as opposed to on the counter, he explained.

"Bar owners want to serve their drinks and make money, but they really want to do something," Wohlfeiler told the B.A.R.

The current funding - of $15,000 only allows the agency to target 20 bars, he said.

List not confidential

On Thursday, February 20, the Bay Area Reporter requested the list of the bars that received Fraser's letter last summer. Initially, Fraser refused to provide the documents, saying they were confidential.

"We want a good relationship with the bars," was Fraser's only comment.

Supervisor Susan Leal learned of the paper's request and also expressed an interest in seeing the information. Her staff was directed to make inquiries into the matter.

Leal's staff contacted the City Attorney's office to determine the legality of the AIDS Office's decision, with relation to the state's Ralph M. Brown Act and the city's Sunshine Ordinance. Both require government offices to make most documents, such as letters sent by the office, available to the press.

Several hours later, the newspaper received the information.

Dr. Mitch Katz maintained his office had "no problem" providing the information to the paper.

Stand out bars

Over the last two weeks, the B.A.R. has started contacting owners and managers of gay bars in an attempt to learn if they currently provide free condoms for customers; or whether they would be interested in distributing rubbers if a city program was in place. Several predominantly gay bars currently have condoms available free for customers year round.

Barresi said when he thinks of condoms in bars, one business is significantly better than others. "One bar stands out, and that's Daddy's. They buy their own condoms."

Daddy's, a leather bar in the heart of the Castro, has been freely giving out the latex since November 3, 1995, the day owner Philip Turner opened his doors.

State held liable for indigent medical care

United Press International

The California Supreme Court has ruled that the obligation to pay for medical care for the poor lies with the state rather than counties.

The court held Monday, March 3 that San Diego County is entitled to reimbursement for the costs of providing health care services to adults who formerly received MediCal because they could not afford medical services.

The state argued that because San Diego had statutory discretion to set eligibility and service standards, there was no mandate for reimbursement.

But the court says the state exaggerated the extent of a county's discretion, because counties cannot refuse medical care to indigent persons.

The court ordered the case back to the Commission on State Mandates to determine whether, and by what amount, state standards of care forced San Diego to incur costs in excess of the funds provided by the state.

The commission will also determine the monetary remedy to which San Diego is entitled.

In the dissent, Justice Joyce Kennard wrote that the counties' win may be a "Pyrrhic victory."

Kennard said that in anticipation of the court's decision, the state enacted legislation that will drastically reduce the counties' share of other state revenue.

In 1991, the Legislature added a section to the Revenue and Taxation Code that moneys collected by the Department of Motor Vehicles for the Local Revenue Fund would cease to be operative following a decision of state liability for medical services to indigent adults. ▼

State bills

eration."

A brief overview of current bills of interest to the lesbian and gay community:

• AB 54, carried by Willard Murray (D-Paramount), is expected to be heard in Assembly Judiciary Committee in mid-March. This bill supports domestic partnership and would provide a statewide domestic partnership registry and hospital visitation and conservatorship rights for domestic partners. Under current law there is no statewide recognition of relationship status, therefore a partner cannot provide healthcare benefits for his/her partner or partner's children. In the absence of a will there is no automatic right of inheritance for the partner or children including estate, assets, and retirement benefits; hospital visitation is not a legal right; and there is no legal provision for decisions regarding hospital treatment and care. This bill would remedy the current lack of partnership rights.

• AB 53, also carried by Murray, has been referred to Assembly Judiciary and is expected to be heard in mid-March. This bill provides that an unmarried adult, a married couple, or two adults who are not legally married may adopt a child. The bill will prohibit a social worker from stating or advocating that adoption by an unmarried couple is not in the best interest of the child based solely upon the couple's marital status. The bill addresses a currently-pending adoption regulation which may force social workers to recommend against gay and lesbian couples as adoptive parents. This bill will prevent gay and lesbian adoptive parents from being discriminated against in the adoptive process.

• AB 101, carried by Sheila Kuehl, reintroduces a bill that adds sexual orientation to the list of groups protected from discrimination in schools. Called the "Dignity for All Students Bill," it has been referred to the Assembly Higher Education Committee and a hearing is set for March 18.

• AB 257, carried by Antonio Villaraigosa, (D-LA), adds sexual orientation to the existing conditions of discrimination addressed by the Fair Employment and Housing Act. The bill is currently on the Assembly Desk and will probably be heard in Assembly Judiciary sometime in April.

• AB 492, introduced by Fred Keeley (D-Monterey), will clean up problems of sexual orientation presented in the Labor Code. Although the code now bars discrimination due to sexual orientation, complainants have only 30 days from the date of the incident to file discrimination charges, versus other protected groups which have a year. The bill clarifies the exemption to the discrimination status for religious organizations granted in AB 2601. That bill, passed in 1992, was intended to exempt only religious organizations, but has been interpreted by the Labor Commissioner to apply to all non-profit organizations with the exemption. Under FEHA and the Labor Code, only religious organizations should be exempt, and this legislation clarifies that status. The bills are expected to be heard in the Assembly Labor Committee in mid-April.

• AB 1059, introduced by Carole Migden (D-San Francisco), provides that the term "eligible spouse" in the Health and Safety and Insurance Codes will include domestic partners for purposes of extending healthcare benefits. Will probably be heard in Assembly Health Committee in April.

• SB 841, introduced by Tom Hayden (D-LA), deals with public contracts and provides that the state may not contract or enter into any other agreement with a contractor that discriminates in the provision of benefits between employees with spouses and employees with domestic partners. Currently this bill is on the Senate Desk and will probably be heard in Senate Judiciary Committee in April.

A word from our malefactors

No legislative session would be complete without bills from the opposition, and a couple to watch would be AB 800 by Bob Margett (R-LA) and SB 911 by Pete Knight (R-San Bernardino). Both deal with the Defense of Marriage Act. The identical bills seek to prohibit California from recognizing same gender marriages performed in other states. The bills seek to protect the compelling interest of "social order, encouraged by fostering procreation and promoting the optimal development of children within a marital setting."

They also claim to keep "the institution of marriage fortified and protected rather than being further undermined and weakened by fundamentally redefining the institution ... to apply to any consenting persons regardless of gender or number" and "the state's treasury protected from the financial burden of providing millions of dollars for spousal healthcare, retirement, and other benefits associated with state recognition of marriages other than between one man and one woman."

Additional provisions of the bills could jeopardize benefits currently received in cities and counties that have passed domestic partners benefits legislation. The bills will likely be heard in April in the Senate and Assembly Judiciary Committees respectively.

• AB 424, introduced by Steve Baldwin (R-San Diego), prohibits the phase out of armed forces training units on post-secondary campuses, and would make it state public policy to allow those units and recruiters access to any campus of any public post-secondary educational unit. It would prohibit the removal and phase-out of those programs and requires reinstatement of those programs previously removed. This bill will probably be heard in Assembly Higher Education in April. ▼

Washington sends docs confusing pot letter

by Bob Roehr

The Clinton administration tried to buy itself some breathing room on medical use of marijuana in a Thursday, February 27 letter to the California Medical Association. But the effort by the Departments of Justice and Health and Human Services only seems to have reinforced skepticism.

The letter expressed concern that "several misperceptions have developed concerning the federal government's response" to the California measure approved by voters. It went out of its way to assure the CMA in two paragraphs that "No 'gag rule' stops physicians from engaging in these discussions" of the risks and benefits of medical marijuana.

But the subsequent paragraph seemed to say, we really didn't mean what we just wrote. It continued: "Such discussions, however, have their limits. Physicians may not intentionally provide their patients with oral or written statements in order to enable them to obtain controlled substances in violation of the law." And it repeated threats to pull the prescription authority of those who do.

The second page of the letter bashed marijuana for lacking "scientific testing" which proves it is an effective drug. It extensively trumpeted negative aspects of the weed.

The letter went on at length about "additional steps" the government was taking. It cited the NIH panel of experts that considered medical marijuana at a meeting February 19-20. But it managed to omit mention of the unanimous conclusion of the panel that marijuana "looks promising enough to recommend there should be some controlled studies," for a number of medical uses.

Marj Plumb, director of public policy for the San Francisco-based Gay and Lesbian Medical Association, found the letter "very interesting." She said, "It means that they are really not hearing the outcry from physicians saying, 'You can't do this, you can't come into our examination rooms like this.'"

"They still see this as part of their war on drugs and as a political issue. I question their commitment to really looking at the research to back up what physicians already know, that this is a useful drug for some patients."

Gary Rose, with the AIDS Action Council, is "encouraged" by what he sees as a small step taken by the administration to move away from its hard line position. He believes the law suit filed in California "is going to drive policy" and eventually force the administration to accept medical judgment as the basis for policy on medical marijuana.

Plumb concluded, "The discussion between the patient and the provider has to be free of any intervention, of any bias, of any gag rules, of any constriction at all." ▼ tion is a good thing," Barresi said. "They like that it [condom distribution] is a very concrete, not abstract prevention tool," said Barresi.

Personal responsibility

Some bar owners do have issues around free latex. Some may feel it's interfering in the sex lives of their customers, despite the obvious fact that many customers have sex with someone they've met at a bar. Barresi said some owners don't think their role is to nose into their customers' sex lives, and some view handing out condoms as being nosy.

There are other reasons too, including the belief that it's a personal responsibility issue.

"It's everyone's personal responsibility for themselves. We're not Big Brother, but we want them available," said Kevin Owens, owner of the Lone Star Saloon, a popular South of Market gay bar.

Owens said that "it's absolutely a good idea" to have latex at all the bars all of the time. But the condoms need to be provided by DPH or an agency that contracts with them to distribute them, such as Stop AIDS Project.

Owens, who has owned the Lone Star since October 1993, told the B.A.R. his establishment has distributed condoms on special occasions in the past, including Pride weekend and the Folsom Street Fair.

"A few months ago, we had a bucket of condoms," Owens said.

The bucket was empty during the recent International Bear Rendezvous.

"If I had them, I'd put them out," he said, adding there is information geared at young adults in the bathrooms. ▼

"Stop AIDS Project connected me with a supplier, and I get a reduced rate because I don't sell them. I spend about $178 every two months," Turner told the B.A.R.

That's about $1,068 per year.

Daddy's has a basket at each station where drinks are served. The bar backs are responsible for making sure the baskets are kept stocked.

Four other bars have rubbers all the time: Polk Gulch Saloon, and the Castro Station, both owned by Steve Valone; the Cafe, managed by Morgan Gorrone; and the Pilsner Inn, owned by Pat Conlin.

Turner said he has "talked up" the idea of condoms in the bars with other owners over the years, with largely unsuccessful results. But to him, it simply makes good business sense.

"If nothing else, bar owners should think about preserving their clientele," he said. "I say the cost is negligible."

"These kids are out here [at gay bars] meeting each other in a very social setting. Let's face it, they pair up, go home, and play. If they can reach over and grab some protection, well, that's what I'm here to do," said Turner.

Said Castro Station's Valone, "We've had condoms for a couple of years now. We get them from Projecto ContraSIDA por Vida." He, too, thinks rubbers should be available at all of the bars.

Gorrone said condoms are provided from DPH, and the Cafe's had them for the last seven months.

Barresi and Turner were asked why more bar owners don't provide free condoms, and what it would take to make that happen. Barresi said an intern at Stop AIDS Project studied the issue of barriers to having condoms at the bars.

"One thing we uniformly found is all [bar owners in the study] agreed condom distribu-

NoCal gay center reps to meet in San Jose

by Cynthia Laird

For the second consecutive year, the Billy DeFrank Center in San Jose will host a networking meeting for Northern and Central California gay community centers next Saturday, March 8. About 15 centers, a few of which have opened in the last three months, are expected to be represented, said Ralph Serpe, executive director at the DeFrank center.

Board members from the Community Center Project (CCP) in San Francisco will be among some 60 people representing community centers in various cities. Serpe said others who are interested in developing gay community centers are welcome to attend the free event.

Scott Shafer, a board member of San Francisco's CCP, said several people from the CCP board will be going to the meeting.

"There is a very vibrant community center movement throughout the state and country," Shafer told the B.A.R. "These regional meetings are very helpful. They energize people, and people can share ideas."

The CCP plans to launch a $2.5 million capital campaign this spring. A design competition is underway for the building, located at Market and Octavia streets. The winning architectural firm will be announced at a public presentation on Sunday, April 19.

Coming together

Serpe, who is on the planning board of the National Association of Gay and Lesbian Community Centers, said that when he used to attend meetings, he would be the only person there from Northern California. He thought that was unusual, given the large gay community in this part of the state.

"Last January [1996] was the first time we all came together," Serpe told the B.A.R., referring to the first gathering. "We had 11 centers. It wasn't a competitive thing; it was a really great experience."

Serpe said that Kerry Iobel, executive director of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force (NGLTF), will be attending the networking meeting, along with Richard Burns, director of the gay community center in New York. Digital Queers and the Horizons Foundation will also be represented, he said.

Serpe said the centers that have opened in the last three months are in Walnut Creek, Eureka, and San Luis Obispo. Additionally, a center in Medford, Oregon has just opened; representatives from that center also plan to attend the San Jose meeting.

Other people at the meeting will be from Spectrum Center in San Anselmo, the Pride Center Sonoma County in Santa Rosa, the Pacific Center in Berkeley, and gay and lesbian community centers in Fremont, Santa Cruz, Sacramento, and Chico.

At the meeting, Serpe said people will introduce themselves and tell where their center is and what they do at the center.

"Each center has a different focus," he said.

Serpe encouraged people interested in attending to call him to register. The Billy DeFrank Center received a grant from Pacific Bell to offset meeting costs. ▼

The meeting takes place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Billy DeFrank Center is located at 175 Stockton Avenue in San Jose. For more information, call Ralph Serpe at (408) 293-2429.

Gay rights support wavers

A new poll released Monday, March 3 shows that while Californians are becoming increasingly supportive of gay rights, they remain opposed to same-sex marriages. The Field Poll found that two-thirds of the public favors a law providing domestic partners with legal family benefits, but 56 percent object to laws that would allow gay or lesbian pairs to marry. ▼

Spanners lose in European court

by Liz Highleyman

The leather community was dealt a blow February 19 when the European Court of Human Rights ruled unanimously to uphold the verdict in the Spanner case, known officially as Regina vs. Brown.

The verdict came two months earlier than originally expected.

The Spanner case involved 15 men in the U.K. who were arrested in 1990 for practicing consensual sadomasochism (SM). A three-year police investigation code-named Operation Spanner uncovered private videotapes showing the men engaged in sadomasochistic activities, for which they were arrested, tried, and sentenced to prison. The judges in the initial court case ruled that consent was immaterial in cases of bodily harm. In an bizarre twist, the men who participated in the activities as bottoms were accused of aiding and abetting assaults upon themselves.

The Spanner defendants brought their case before the Law Lords, the highest court of appeal in the U.K. In March 1993, that court upheld the original verdict in a split decision, ruling that the government has a right to intervene in private behavior in defense of "health and public morals." Three of the original defendants — Roland Jaggard, Tony Brown, and Colin Laskey — then appealed the case to the European Court in Strasbourg, France last October (Laskey has since died, as has another of the original defendants, Alan Oversby, also known as Mr. Sebastien). All three of the defendants lost their jobs, and Jaggard was forced to undergo psychiatric treatment.

Countdown on Spanner/Spanner Trust was organized to call attention to the case and raise money for legal expenses; several such fundraising events have been held in the Bay Area in recent years. After more than a year of preparation, the court proceedings lasted only three hours.

The nine judges ruled that "the state has an incontestable right to regulate through the penal code practices which can harm the body. The determination of what level of harm to tolerate when the victim consents is first and foremost up to the state authorities." The court agreed that it was "unquestionably one of the roles of the state to regulate activities which involve the infliction of physical harm," and that it is "the prerogative of the state on moral grounds to deter acts of the kind in question." The defendants had engaged in activities that included whipping, piercing, and genital torture. None of the men sustained permanent injury or even required first aid.

Concept of private life

In a concurring addendum to the ruling, Judge Pettiti stated that "the concept of private life cannot be stretched indefinitely. The dangers of unrestrained permissiveness, which can lead to debauchery, pedophilia and torture of others, has been highlighted at the World Conference in Stockholm [on the sexual abuse of children]. The protection of private life means the protection of a person's intimacy and dignity, not the protection of his baseness or the promotion of criminal immorality." He concluded that the convictions were "necessary in a democratic society for the protection of health."

Pettiti further suggested that the ruling in this case should lead to an expansion of Paragraph 43 of the European Charter to allow national governments "to regulate and punish practices of sexual abuse that are demeaning, even if they do not involve the infliction of physical harm."

As the Spanner case wended its way through the appeals process, substantial changes have occurred in British public opinion and offi-or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others."

The British government based its counter-argument on the "health and morals" clause. In general, the legal system in Europe does not manifest the strong emphasis on individual rights and civil liberties that is the basis of much U.S. jurisprudence.

The Spanner defendants also claimed that they were discriminated against because of their sexual orientation. As evidence, they cial attitudes toward consensual SM. As Kellan Farshea, organizer of Countdown on Spanner, stated, "the climate of opinion in Britain regarding SM has changed immeasurably" over the past five years. "This decision may once have had a mandate in public opinion, but it does not now. We have seen a marked shift away from pure condemnation towards a laissez-faire attitude. What we do in private, and what we do with our own bodies, is a matter for us to decide."

The men who participated as bottoms were accused of aiding and abetting assaults upon themselves.

Even the Times of London asserted in an editorial that the ruling of the Law Lords in the case was "illiberal nonsense." Since the original convictions, England's Crown Prosecution Service has changed its guidelines such that the arrests in the Spanner case would be unlikely to occur today. In addition, the British Law Commission has recommended that the laws on consent be amended to permit SM activity that does not result in serious or disabling injury.

At the same time, however, U.K. authorities have moved against several SM-related events and organizations over the past two years.

Not a human rights court

The European Court grew out of the European Convention on Human Rights in 1950. In recognition of the diversity of values and legal standards in the signatory countries, the convention embodies the principal of non-intervention in the affairs of nations. The European Court is a political court, and does not focus on ensuring the human rights of individuals. It is not expected that the Spanner ruling will have sweeping implications, since it essentially reaffirms the principal that decisions regarding whether and how to regulate individuals' private behavior are largely under the jurisdiction of the country in question.

The defendants in the case attempted to argue that their right to a private life had been infringed by the British court's ruling. Article 8 of the European Convention states that "everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence," and that "there shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety

Deadline for all obituaries is Monday at 5 p.m.

David Tully Anderson

June 12, 1949 – Jan. 1, 1997

David Tully Anderson died on Jan. 1 at 6:35 a.m. EST of cancer at the VA Medical Center in Dayton, Ohio, while visiting his family for the holidays.

David was born in Brandt, Ohio; served in the U.S. Army from 1969 to 1971; and soon after his discharge, moved to San Francisco. He began working at the Midnight Sun in 1973, where he remained as one of the fastest and most popular bartenders in the Castro District until a change of bar ownership and the death of his partner, Robert, in 1989. In 1993, David and his new partner, Jerry, purchased a home in the historic district of Savannah, Ga., where the two had been happily attending auctions and working to renovate their home.

David "Tully" was a delightful man, filled with wonder and enthusiasm for life. He was also a loyal, loving, steadfast son, brother, uncle, co-worker and friend – and will be greatly missed by us all. He is survived by a loving and supportive family, including his mother, Mary; brothers, Gary, Tom and Keith; sisters, Marilyn and Deborah; many in-laws, nieces and nephews; his partner, Jerry; his cat, John; special friends, Victoria, Dr. John and LA Tom; and many other friends and acquaintances.

Forest Baker

1943 – 1997

Forest died last month from AIDS. Following his wishes there was a private cremation – without ceremony. Forest's "real" life began with a decision to leave the (apparently) heartless Napa, Calif. family of his growing-up time. He arrives here with the hippie era. Much chaos. A plunge into anti-war work (the political streak resurfaces later – ACT UP, DNCB in the '80s). And having a butterfly nature, he's soon making beautiful collages, too, plus stunning bead work and fab art quilts. The many faces of Forest. And developing a rich social life at the hippie gay bar: The Capri. Here he meets his best friend, Michael (Ford). Will the party go on forever?

In New York, problems. Shooting up with near-great sleazes and glam queens, Ondine and Holly. As this gradually appears to take its toll, he thinks, Why not leave this and go back?

He does. Once back here in the '80s, there's a settling down. The speed's stopped being a problem. He's older and quieter, isn't he? So he meets lover-for-life, Sam. Oops, it's the '90s. Where did the time go? What to do now?

"For my last act," Forest does the Capri oral history interviews. Taping survivors of "back then." They're great. But it's time to go. So he does. Au revoir, honey, and goddess bless (if there is one to bless). Much love – B.

Arturo "Art" Guzman

July 9, 1941 – Feb. 16, 1997

Arturo's many friends and customers will miss the smile and friendly greeting that "Art" always had for his legions of fans during the many years of his bartending career in San Francisco.

Born in Dallas, Texas, he moved to San Francisco as a young man and was one of the city's most popular bartenders for many years; his last place of employment was at the P.S. Lounge on Polk Street.

Art is survived by his mother, Angela; four brothers; one sister; and many, many friends. A memorial service in his honor was held last week in the city that he adopted as his home, and he leaves behind literally hundreds of friends who will miss him greatly. Rest in peace, Arturo.

Donald Lundgren

June 16, 1945 – Feb. 24, 1997

Diagnosed only one month ago with terminal lung cancer, Don passed away peacefully, nurtured by his friends, Richard, Sally, Kathleen, Chad, Larry, Ken, Pat and Chapeau.

He was an easy patient to tend to, thanks to the incredible care of the Visiting Nurses from Hospice.

Don was honored as a master of leather in the '80s and a bridge Life Master in the '90s. A bridge game in his honor is being planned. This singleton king of hearts is now a void in our hearts.

Bill Wallis

July 23, 1925 – Feb. 27, 1997

"Mr. Bill," as he was affectionately called by his many friends and acquaintances, had been a member of the U.S. Army. He was involved in the management of both Reflections and the Polk Rendezvous, and even worked very diligently during his last year of illness.

Mr. Bill was a fanatic for Scrabble tournaments, and played all around the country as well as on ships. There will be a celebration of his life on Sunday, March 16, 4-7 p.m., at Reflections Cocktail Lounge (1160 Polk, 771-6262). Mr. Bill was loved by those who knew him through the years, and he will be missed by all of us. Play that Scrabble in the sky, Mr. Bill!

SF to get $2M
more in AIDS funds
No cuts in any service categories

by Cynthia Laird

San Francisco has received $2 million more in federal Ryan White CARE Act money than expected, the city announced Tuesday, March 4. According to Dr. Gene Copello, chief of health and prevention services, that means there will be no cuts in any service categories for the 1997-98 funding cycle.

The eligible metropolitan area (EMA) includes San Francisco, San Mateo, and Marin counties. Copello said San Mateo and Marin will receive $2.1 million and $1.3 million respectively. San Francisco's total in CARE funds will be $37.3 million. Between the unexpected $2 million and city's general fund money, Copello said AIDS/HIV services funded by CARE will not be reduced.

"I'm delighted," Copello told the B.A.R. "We did really well. We were told by the Health Resources Services Agency [HRSA] that we did very well."

Copello explained there are two funding parts to Ryan White funds: the formula, which is a calculated amount; and the supplemental, which is a competitive process with all EMAs in the country. He said San Francisco's application for the competitive funds has "proven once again" the city's leadership and experience in AIDS services.

During last year's prioritization process, Copello told members of the Mayor's HIV Health Services Planning Council that the amount from the supplemental award was not known.

"I was conservative from the beginning," Copello said, referring to estimates of CARE funding.

Council member William Carter said he was not the least bit surprised San Francisco did so well.

"The issue to me, along with how much [money] we get, is what we do with it," Carter told the B.A.R., adding he sees funding in some service categories as an issue to discuss.

He said he is more concerned with Governor Pete Wilson's proposal to take CARE money from the nine EMAs in California to help fund the AIDS Drug Assistance Program (ADAP).

Copello said he'll discuss the award letter from HRSA with the council at its meeting on Monday, March 10. ▼

The planning council meeting starts at 4:30 p.m. and will be held in the sixth floor conference room at the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, 10 United Nations Plaza, at Seventh and Market streets.

U.S. records first drop in AIDS deaths

by Mike Pezzella, UPI Science News

Federal health researchers say the number of deaths from AIDS declined in the first half of 1996, the first drop since the epidemic began in 1980. In a report issued Thursday, February 27 by the Centers of Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, officials say deaths from AIDS decreased 12 percent in the first six months of 1996 compared to the same period in 1995.

Federal researchers listed 50,000 AIDS deaths in 1995. During the first six months of 1996 there were 22,000 deaths. ▼ fight must continue if people with AIDS are to survive. It's unfathomable that after ten years, a movement is still struggling for the same issues, and incredible that a patients' rights action group is still on the front lines. ACT UP is alive and well in the continuing battle because AIDS is not over!

The following are ten reasons why direct action is still needed if AIDS is to be wiped out:

1) Drug development: New drugs must be made in order to combat the ferocious mutant capabilities of the HIV virus. People with AIDS need more options for treatment. According to several studies, more than 15% of people with HIV will not respond or "fail" current triple therapy. Controlling the complicated resistance, compliance, and toxicity of anti-HIV regimens is something researchers must reckon with. A concentrated focus and plan for upcoming development in basic science and in the clinic for new generations of treatments is needed to truly conquer AIDS.

2) Access to healthcare for all: The irony of inaccessibility to drugs and healthcare in light of all the treatment progress being made is outrageous. Costs are out of line, causing drug assistance programs and Medicaid to be broke. Our healthcare delivery system is about to implode. Congress and the administration must come to terms with the failure of our healthcare delivery system.

3) Immune-based research:

Broken immune systems need to be repaired, even in light of the new promising antivirals. CMV (cytomegalovirus) is appearing in people with CD4 counts of over 200 who have had dramatic rises in T-cells after success with triple drug regimens. This information leads us to ask, what kind of functioning cells are left to ward off further infection? Scientists must get over their egotist stranglehold on the sexy antiviral arena and allow immune-based researchers their moment of discovery.

4) Universal healthcare instead of managed care: The expense of the healthcare industry and demise of fee-for-service system is causing practices to close and qualified HIV doctors to be forced out of practice.

Recent studies have shown that patients treated by knowledgeable AIDS physicians survive longer. Managed care clearly will not serve the needs of people with AIDS, let alone the elderly, people with heart disease, and cancer. In the '90s, managing people's healthcare has become managing profitability. It has become a system of greed and neglect. Kaiser Permanente is a prototype of how an HMO can be forced to provide services. It took ACT UP/Golden Gate, with the support of Supervisor Tom Ammiano, to change Kaiser's ways. The Kaiser upheaval was meant to be a precedent-setting example for how all other HMOs must provide for the needs of their patients. Kaiser, however, is only the tip of the iceberg.

5) Lift the ban on needle exchange funding: Innumerable studies have shown the safety and effectiveness of needle exchange. Recently, the door to federal funding of local needle exchange programs was cracked open by Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala, who authored a letter and report recognizing that needle exchange is effective at reducing HIV and other blood-borne diseases. Unfortunately, there was no mention of lifting the ban on federal funding for needle exchange, something the Clinton administration has been given the power to do by Congress. Injection drug users have the fastest-growing incidence of new HIV infection. They are front-line casualties in the politically motivated war on drugs.

6) Modified and strengthened prevention programs: Prevention efforts must meet the changing demographics of the disease and educate injection drug users and at-risk youth. It is past time for information about condom usage and clean needles to be up-front, open and honest, and for prevention programs to deal with the reality of gay youth.

7) An acceptable national leader for directing efforts against AIDS: The AIDS czar position has been a continuous joke. The job has been nothing but a powerless mouthpiece for the president. Ending AIDS will require a dedicated leader to strategize, plan and pull all efforts together.

8) AIDS careerism must end: The money-making machine that the epidemic has bred is a disgrace and an outrage. Our community-based organizations have become a means for a career. Our community must come to terms with the realities of the epidemic and assess what is useful and needed. The pharmaceutical and diagnostic industries must be investigated and scrutinized by congressional hearings for their greedy price-gouging.

9) The global epidemic: Ninety percent of people with AIDS are outside of the US. Basic support such as clean water and shelter, let alone effective treatments, are out of reach for most people with AIDS in underdeveloped countries. The United States must play a larger role through funding and research. A newly directed international effort towards creating an effective preventative vaccine is crucial.

10) It ain't over till it's over: The Centers for Disease Control last week announced that AIDS deaths have decreased by 13%. However, three people still die from AIDS every day in San Francisco; ten die every day in New York. Only when people stop suffering and dying should the fighting stop. We must overcome the apathy led by the mainstream media in their spin that AIDS is over. Even though the first act of the epidemic may be over, the curtain is not down on the final act. ▼ their whistles at home and throw a festive, extraordinary party," declared Lauro. Participants in the first ACT UP action on Wall Street held a decade ago are expected to share their amusing anecdotes of that momentous day.

Organizers are making a special effort to contact former members of the other local chapter that ACT UP/Golden Gate once worked closely with, added Lauro.

People are being asked to rummage through their closets to find old (or not so old) ACT UP memorabilia to bring to the birthday party. There will be several prizes awarded, including honors for "best activist drag," and "best ACT UP memorabilia."

Lauro said there will be a memorabilia display, an exhibit of photographs, and other materials culled from ACT UP's archives. The displays will all speak to the crucial role ACT UP had in changing the course of history of the AIDS crisis.

San Francisco resident and AIDS activist Michael Petrelis was at that first ACT UP meeting in New York, and was one of the Wall Street 17. When asked to make a comment about his involvement in ACT UP, he said, "I wish we had the cure for AIDS by now - and thought we would have had a cure for AIDS by now."

Say 'Thank you'

The first ACT UP was formed March 24, 1987 when a group of activists gathered in New York City. [See related story.]

Nationally, the metamorphosis of AIDS activists became one of the most successful mass movements for social change. What started as a meeting of people in New York City quickly became a major voice for people with AIDS. A decade later, members continue to "ACT UP, fight back, fight AIDS" across the country.

The ACT UP/Golden Gate chapter has done a lot since it formed in 1990, Lauro said. Among the long list of accomplishments are reductions in drug prices, and expanding access to numerous HIV/AIDS treatments; leading the way for federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval of protease inhibitors; ensuring targeted prevention efforts; providing weekly AIDS treatment articles; and improving care for patients at Kaiser hospitals by forcing the giant health maintenance organization to provide access to viral load tests and human growth hormone.

"The time is long overdue for the numerable workers from all the more prosperous AIDS agencies forged by us putting our asses on the line when needed, and their clients, to do their part - to show up on March 10 and say, 'Thank you' to the activists whose skill, savvy, anger, and courage have left us a legacy that we can all be proud of," said Lauro.

Doctors, PWAs, executive directors, people swallowing free protease inhibitors or getting free viral load tests, support service workers, planning council members, nurses, and others who have benefited from ACT UP/Golden Gate's work but from whom the group seldom hears, are also urged to help honor the many achievements ACT UP has made in the last decade, organizers added. ▼

Tickets are available at A Different Light Bookstore, 489 Castro Street. The birthday bash will be held at Most Holy Redeemer Church, 100 Diamond Street, at 18th Street. Doors open at 5:30 p.m.; dinner will be served from 6 to 8 p.m. For more information or to bring memorabilia items, call (415) 252-9266.

Will you consider an experimental Immune Modulator?

Volunteers are needed to participate in a placebo-controlled research study of Alferon[®] N Injection, a drug designed to stimulate your immune system.

You must be HIV-positive with at least 250 T-cells and on stable or no antiretroviral therapy.

Study Drug will be available to all placebo recipients after 24 weeks.

Huddle up

by Jim Provenzano

The response to my "Why I Hate Pro Football" column was quite amazing. Many folk wrote letters, e-mailed each other and copied that article to their friends and enemies around Super Bowl time. It gives me great pleasure to undermine the patriarchy in any way shape or form.

The column was not, however, meant in any way to disparage the efforts of gay footballers, both amateur and pro. They are the ones risking life and limb on and off the field. To them I offer my constant admiration.

But all problematic athletic endeavors deserve a critique. One way is to offer a comparison between our elder countries and their athletic variations. The best variation on football, is, of course, football. We call it rugby.

Rugby is football before it went American. It's funny, more violent, more sexy, stripped down, and reduced to the bare butt sport that football used to be.

In fact, before I so stridently trashed the corporate version of the game, I should have considered the charming description of American football given by David Starr Jordan, former president of Stanford University about a hundred years ago, who called football "Rugby's American pervert."

To paraphrase a recent rabid letter-writer, my chops are already licking! Any form of perversion is welcome in sports, and thereby culture. It is only through perversion that variegation in behavior can be achieved. And it is through diversion, perversion, whatever, that our species will change and adapt, and survive, or else it will die off.

One sport that shows no sign of dying off is rugby, which, when compared to American football, seems quite perverted indeed. I love it.

Let's start with fashion. Gone are the camouflaging pads and puffs. Nope, these guys (and gals) are reduced to basic shirts and shorts, and some very short shorts at that. What more can a fan ask for than the vision of solid horse-like gams, with an all-too-frequent cheek flash, or in the case of more active participation, mud-soaked and shredded garments?

Are we awake now?

I promise not to scrum in your...

The terminology is not easy to fathom, being that most of my study includes British publications, where the Queen's English gets tossed around more than that little pigskin.

Take the word scrum. Just say it aloud, will ya? Scrum. A cross between spit, scrotum, and cum? Whatever you think, it's actually that huddle for the ball that gives fans a charming view of every player's posterior. Some even grab each other's posteriors. Being that this is a very demanding sport, and the players are fairly chunky, usually there's a lot to grab.

Rugby in the raw: Big butts and shredded shorts.

"On the pitch": when a player is actively playing rugby. This term has other sexual implications that are too obvious. But my general favorite (I couldn't find the term) is the moment when the athlete receiving the ball in the air gets hoisted up by his mates, each of them making fists, since open-handed grabs seem verboten. The gent resembles a statue being put up for display, and things tend to get grabbed at all points in such formations. Space forbids me showing the other amusing images obtained through high-speed photography.

The best local rugby-watching can be had at the soccer stadium and polo fields in Golden Gate Park. Men and women's teams practice there regularly. The homo ratio seems fairly low, though. But hey, there's no harm in watching!

How about a queer rugby league? Since Gay Games approach, it seems that the diversity of our interests should equally expand.

For a good field workout in the honest version of football, give the gay football teams a try. Even though the season's over, they do get together for practices. As far as I know, they do keep their pants on for practice.

Now that the massive marketing ritual of the Super Bowl is over with for another year, what are all those poor football addicts going to do, other than watch highlight shows? Well, I guess that's what all those boring Sunday morning sports shows are for, a whole 'nother year of armchair quarterbacking.

Luckily there is a women flag football team. Their rep didn't get back to me in time for this article, but I'm sure they'd return a call from a women eager to rough it with the team.

Men who still want to actually play have limited gay group opportunities. According to my research, both the San Francisco Trojans Football team and the East Bay Gay/Bi Sports Players have both either disbanded or are in hiatus. Any active or former members are welcome to update me on that. Gay & bisexual men's Flag Touch Football is active, and they play in Louis Sutter Park, at University & Weyland, near McLaren Park, in San Francisco every Saturday morning at 10 a.m. Go on down and get muddy! ▼

A cure for financial stress.

When you or someone you know is living with AIDS, a life insurance policy can be sold to our company for immediate cash. It may sound strange, but it's true. Every year, we buy millions of dollars worth of life insurance from people who need to relieve financial stress from their lives.

As a pioneer in our industry, we know first hand how important money becomes when survival is an expensive choice.

Liberace

$95,000 to end the legal maneuvers.

By that time, Liberace's health had begun to waver from AIDS. Despite an increasingly gaunt appearance, the entertainer played to sold-out crowds in Radio City Music Hall, where he made a grand entrance by flying above the audience on cables. When questioned about Liberace's weight loss, his manager told the press that Liberace was on a "watermelon diet" and was in generally good health. Not until Liberace's coroner held a nationally televised press conference was AIDS revealed as the cause of death, and to this day, some of the devoted elderly women who conduct tours at the Liberace Museum in Las Vegas insist that Liberace's so-called homosexuality and AIDS are nothing but cruel rumors about a talented bachelor.

Liberace's life was replete with contradictions about his sexuality. His autobiography states that he lost his virginity to a female singer in Milwaukee — yet he gives her the classically drag name of "Miss Bea Haven." He would introduce his lover to his audiences as his companion — yet he told the press that gays were trying to "assassinate" him with Thorson's lawsuit. With his extravagant costumes and flaming style, his life can be seen as a befuddled attempt to argue that you don't have to be gay to be campy. ▼

Christopher Guest parodies Middle America in 'Waiting for Guffman'

Still life, with queer

by Robert Julian

Christopher Guest as Corky St. Clair in 'Waiting for Guffman.'

What hath Rob Reiner wrought? In 1984, This Is Spinal Tap featured Christopher Guest as the lead guitarist in Reiner's faux documentary about a rock group on tour. Now Guest is back as co-writer, director and star of Waiting for Guffman — a pseudo-documentary that parodies the pathetic efforts of a small Midwestern town to produce a musical about the town's history.

Guffman resembles an extended Saturday Night Live skit, full of satire and irony, but — like any really good SNL sketch — Guffman frequently skirts so close to reality that laughter arises not only from the dialogue, but also from the recognition of the frequently lunatic behavior encountered in everyday life. It's hard to imagine anyone who won't laugh out loud in several places during Christopher Guest's tour de force.

Hand-held documentary cameras and onscreen interviews tell the story of Blaine, Missouri's 150th anniversary celebration, commemorated by a new original musical, Red, White and Blaine — written, directed and choreographed by Corky St. Clair (Guest). The cameras follow artiste St. Clair and the motley crew of amateurs he assembles to tell the musical story of Blaine, the footstool capital of America.

The all-singing, all-dancing ensemble includes the local dentist (Eugene Levy), two travel agents (Fred Willard and Catherine O'Hara), a soda jerk (Parker Posey), an auto mechanic (Matt Keeslar) and a taxidermist (Lewis Arquette). St. Clair engages in a minor turf battle with his musical director (Bob Balaban), and eventually he walks out on the production midway through rehearsals when the city council refuses his request for $100,000 in grant money. Tempers flare, personalities clash, and tension mounts as the star-struck local cast anxiously awaits the opening night arrival of Mr. Guffman, the representative of a big-time Broadway production company.

Close to the edge

Director Guest coaxes strong performances from his entire cast, with each actor playing it close to the edge without crossing the line. Eugene Levy, as the Jewish dentist, gets the most comic mileage from his character — an awkward bore who studied the class clown in high school to learn how to be the life of the party. But the married travel agents (Willard and O'Hara), referred to as the "Lunts of Blaine," offer a killer audition piece — a duet of "Midnight at the Oasis."

At the end, the documentary camera follows the cast members after the show closes, providing the richest moments of the film. As it turns out, Red, White and Blaine is a seminal event in the lives of these small-town nabobs. Their brush with stardom causes some of them to uproot themselves from their friends and

'Boys Life 2' is four takes on queer life

Quadratic equation

by Gary Morris

Short films are in some ways the ultimate cinematic consumable — a brief sketch of an experience that, like a poem or a short story, can suggest a whole world in a few deft strokes. Of course consumable implies disposable, which is exactly what happens to work that often fails to make a lasting impression and can't find venues outside the occasional film festival or the filmmaker's living room.

Boys Life 2 is the ideal package to counter the notion that short films are inherently trivial and unmarketable. The producers have put together four strong pieces dealing with contemporary gay life and released them as a feature. The films deal with controversial topics like teen sexuality and homosexual revenge, and avoid the nagging problems of insularity and self-absorption that afflict so much of gay filmmaking.

PREVENTION OF CMV DISEASE IN PATIENTS WITH HIV

A Focus on CMV Retinitis

CMV: A Serious Infection in Immunocompromised Patients

Cytomegalovirus (CMV), a virus of the herpes family, is the most common serious viral opportunistic pathogen in HIV-positive patients. It is estimated that >95% of patients with AIDS are CMV seropositive,¹ with up to 46% developing CMV retinitis, which may be sight-threatening.²⁻⁶ In one study, disseminated CMV was found at autopsy in roughly 9 of every 10 in this patient population.⁶

Acute infection with CMV is usually asymptomatic and the prevalence of CMV antibody in the adult population may be as great as 50% to 80%.⁷ As with other herpes viruses, CMV remains latent within the host and may cause infection if and when the immune system becomes compromised. Prospective natural history studies have shown that during the course of HIV infection, as CD4 counts fall (Figure 1), the virus may be reactivated, resulting in viremia.⁸ During viremia, CMV may disseminate and seed a variety of organs, leading to many life- or sight-threatening conditions, including retinitis, colitis, esophagitis, hepatitis, pneumonitis, adrenalitis and generalized wasting.

Solid blue line = <50 cells/mm³; dotted line = 50-99 cells/mm³; solid gray line = ≥100 cells/mm³. The difference between the lower and upper two lines was significant by log-rank test ($p < 0.001$); difference between two upper lines was not significant ($p < 0.05$). From Gallant, et al. J Infect Dis. 1992;166:1223-1227 with permission.⁹

CMV: The Most Common Cause of Vision Loss Associated with AIDS^{7,9}

Often referred to as a "silent" problem, CMV frequently begins as asymptomatic peripheral disease. Untreated CMV retinitis is a progressive disease, which most often ultimately becomes a bilateral disease.¹⁰ Without treatment, CMV retinitis may obliterate the entire retina in 3 to 6 months.⁹

In the past, management of CMV retinitis relied solely on early diagnosis and aggressive lifelong intravenous therapy. In January 1995, an oral formulation of an effective therapeutic agent, ganciclovir, became available for maintenance treatment of CMV retinitis. In October 1995, oral ganciclovir also became available as preventive therapy against CMV disease in individuals with advanced HIV infection at risk for developing CMV disease.

Promising Results from the First Oral CMV Prevention Study

The results of Roche Study 1654, the first oral CMV prevention study, were presented at the Second National Conference on Human Retroviruses and Related Infections in January 1995.¹¹ This double-blind, randomized, placebo-controlled study was designed to determine the safety and efficacy of oral ganciclovir (3 grams/day) for the prevention of CMV disease. The study included CMV-seropositive or urine culture-positive, HIV-infected patients with CD4 counts ≤100 cells/mm³ and a prior AIDS-defining opportunistic infection and those with <50 cells/mm³ without a prior opportunistic infection.¹²

Nearly 50% Lower Risk of Developing CMV Disease After Prophylaxis Treatment with Oral Ganciclovir¹³

Over an 18-month study period, the incidence of CMV disease was significantly lower in the ganciclovir-treated group vs. placebo ($p < 0.05$).¹³ The risk of developing CMV disease was reduced by 49% in patients treated with oral ganciclovir (20% of the ganciclovir patients developed CMV disease vs 39% on placebo) (Table 1).^{13,14}

Table 1. Incidence of CMV Disease at 6, 12 and 18 Months (Kaplan-Meier Estimates) in Study 1654 Patients¹⁴

	Incidence of CMV Disease (no. still at risk)
	Ganciclovir	Placebo
6 months	8% (397)	11% (190)
12 months	14% (225)	26% (92)
18 months	20% (27)	39% (9)

In addition to decreasing the incidence of CMV disease, oral ganciclovir significantly delayed the time to the development of disease (Figure 2).¹¹

Number of patients	Number of patients at risk, months ^a
	0	3	6	9	12	15	18
Ganciclovir	486	452	397	326	225	112	27
Placebo	239	214	190	149	92	35	9

Because of the significant benefit of oral ganciclovir in preventing CMV disease compared to placebo, Study 1654 was halted at a planned interim analysis.

Placebo Patients Were Twice as Likely to Develop Sight-threatening Retinitis¹⁴

Patients in the placebo group were twice as likely to develop zone 1 (sight-threatening) retinitis as patients treated with oral ganciclovir.¹⁴ Among subjects who developed CMV retinitis, 39% of placebo patients developed zone 1 disease vs 16% of those on ganciclovir.¹⁴ There was a similar incidence of bilateral presentation of retinitis in the treatment and placebo groups.¹⁴

Results from Study 1654 demonstrated that oral ganciclovir prophylaxis significantly reduced the incidence of, and delayed time to development of, CMV disease in HIV-infected persons at risk.^{11,13}

CMV Resistance¹⁶

As part of Study 1654, cultures (primarily urine) were available for 437 patients who received preventive treatment with oral ganciclovir for ≥90 days. Of these, 132 had at least 1 positive culture. Eighteen of these isolates have been tested for reduced sensitivity, and 1 was found to be resistant to ganciclovir. The resistant isolate was associated with subsequent treatment failure. Viral resistance has also been observed with prolonged treatment for retinitis with intravenous ganciclovir.

Manageable Side Effect Profile

Oral ganciclovir has a manageable side effect profile, but was associated with granulocytopenia, anemia and thrombocytopenia.¹⁶ In Study 1654 ganciclovir-treated patients were significantly more likely to develop neutropenia (absolute neutrophil count <500 cells/mm³, 10% vs 6%).¹⁶ Colony stimulating factors can help manage ganciclovir-related neutropenia. Other adverse events included diarrhea, nausea, vomiting, stomach upset, loss of appetite, headache, dizziness, tremor, tingling sensation in the fingers and weakness.¹⁶ Creatinine elevations 25% over baseline levels were also observed.¹⁶

Summary

Prevention of CMV disease has been a highly sought-after goal. Compared with placebo, oral ganciclovir (3 grams/day) has been shown to significantly reduce the incidence and time to development of CMV disease among patients with advanced HIV infection.^{11,16} There was also a decreased proportion of zone 1 (sight-threatening) retinitis in the ganciclovir-treated group.

Oral ganciclovir represents a clinically important advance in the prevention of CMV disease, including CMV retinitis, for those with HIV.

Please see summary of product information on adjacent pages.

The clinical toxicity of CYTOVENE® (ganciclovir capsules) includes granulocytopenia, anemia and thrombocytopenia. In animal studies, ganciclovir was carcinogenic, teratogenic and caused aspermatogenesis.

CYTOTENE-IV
(ganciclovir sodium for injection)
FOR INTRAVENOUS INFUSION ONLY CYTOTENE®
(ganciclovir capsules)
FOR ORAL ADMINISTRATION

Before prescribing, please see complete product information, a summary of which follows:

THE CLINICAL TOXICITY OF CYTOTENE-IV AND CYTOTENE-IV INCLUDES GRANULOCYTOPENIA, ANEMIA AND THROMBOCYTOPENIA. IN ANIMAL STUDIES GANCICLOVIR WAS CARCINOGENIC, TERATOGENIC AND CAUSED ASPERMATOGENESIS.

CYTOTENE-IV IS INDICATED FOR USE ONLY IN THE TREATMENT OF CYTOMEGALOVIRUS (CMV) RETINITIS IN IMMUNOCOMPROMISED PATIENTS AND FOR THE PREVENTION OF CMV DISEASE IN TRANSPLANT PATIENTS AT RISK FOR CMV DISEASE.

CYTOTENE CAPSULES ARE INDICATED ONLY FOR PREVENTION OF CMV DISEASE IN PATIENTS WITH ADVANCED HIV INFECTION AT RISK FOR CMV DISEASE, AND FOR MAINTENANCE TREATMENT OF CMV RETINITIS IN IMMUNOCOMPROMISED PATIENTS (see INDICATIONS AND USAGE section in complete product information).

BECAUSE CYTOTENE CAPSULES ARE ASSOCIATED WITH A RISK OF MORE RAPID RATE OF CMV RETINITIS PROGRESSION, THEY SHOULD BE USED AS MAINTENANCE TREATMENT ONLY IN THOSE PATIENTS FOR WHOM THIS RISK IS BALANCED BY THE BENEFIT ASSOCIATED WITH AVOIDING GALL INTRAVENOUS INFUSIONS.

CONTRAINDICATIONS: CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE are contraindicated in patients with hypersensitivity to ganciclovir or acyclovir.

WARNINGS: Hematologic: CYTOTENE and CYTOTENE-IV should not be administered if the absolute neutrophil count is less than 500 cells/ μ L or the platelet count is less than 25,000 cells/ μ L. Granulocytopenia (neutropenia), anemia and thrombocytopenia have been observed in patients treated with CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE. The frequency and severity of these events vary widely in different patient populations (see ADVERSE EVENTS section).

CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE should, therefore, be used with caution in patients with pre-existing cytopenias or with a history of cytotoxic reactions to other drugs, chemicals or irradiation. Granulocytopenia usually occurs during the first or second week of treatment but may occur at any time during treatment. Cell counts usually begin to recover within 3 to 7 days of discontinuing drug. Colony-stimulating factors have been shown to increase neutrophil and white blood cell counts in patients receiving CYTOTENE-IV solution for treatment of CMV retinitis.

Impairment of Fertility: Animal data indicate that administration of ganciclovir causes inhibition of spermatogenesis and subsequent infertility. These effects were reversible at lower doses and irreversible at higher doses (see Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis and Impairment of Fertility in PRECAUTIONS section). Although data in humans have not been obtained regarding this effect, it is considered probable that ganciclovir at the recommended doses causes temporary or permanent inhibition of spermatogenesis. Animal data also indicate that suppression of fertility in females may occur.

Teratogenesis: Because of the mutagenic and teratogenic potential of ganciclovir, women of childbearing potential should be advised to use effective contraception during treatment. Similarly, men should be advised to practice barrier contraception during and for at least 90 days following treatment with CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE (see Pregnancy: Category C).

PRECAUTIONS: General: In clinical studies with CYTOTENE-IV, the maximum single dose administered was 6 mg/kg by intravenous infusion over 1 hour. Larger doses have resulted in increased toxicity. It is likely that more rapid infusions would also result in increased toxicity (see OVERDOSEAGE section). Administration of CYTOTENE-IV solution should be accompanied by adequate hydration.

Initially, reconstituted solutions of CYTOTENE-IV have a high pH (11). Despite further dilution in intravenous fluids, phlebitis and/or pain may occur at the site of intravenous infusion. Care must be taken to infuse solutions containing CYTOTENE-IV only into veins with adequate blood flow to permit rapid dilution and distribution (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION section in complete product information).

Since ganciclovir is excreted by the kidneys, normal clearance depends on adequate renal function. If RENAL FUNCTION IS IMPAIRED, DOSE ADJUSTMENTS ARE REQUIRED FOR CYTOTENE-IV AND SHOULD BE CONSIDERED FOR CYTOTENE CAPSULES. Such adjustments should be based on measured or estimated creatinine clearance values (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION section).

Information for Patients: All patients should be informed that the major toxicities of ganciclovir are granulocytopenia (neutropenia), anemia and thrombocytopenia and that dose modifications may be required, including discontinuation. The importance of close monitoring of blood counts while on therapy should be emphasized. Patients should be informed that ganciclovir has been associated with elevations in serum creatinine.

Patients should be instructed to take CYTOTENE capsules with food to maximize bioavailability.

Patients should be advised that ganciclovir has caused decreased sperm production in animals and may cause infertility in humans. Women of childbearing potential should be advised that ganciclovir causes birth defects in animals and should not be used during pregnancy. Women of childbearing potential should be advised to use effective contraception during treatment with CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE. Similarly, men should be advised to practice barrier contraception during and for at least 90 days following treatment with CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE.

Patients should be advised that ganciclovir causes tumors in animals. Although there is no information from human studies, ganciclovir should be considered a potential carcinogen.

All HIV+ Patients: These patients may be receiving zidovudine (Retrovir). Patients should be counseled that treatment with both ganciclovir and zidovudine simultaneously may not be tolerated by some patients and may result in severe granulocytopenia (neutropenia). Patients with AIDS may be receiving didanosine (Videx). Patients should be counseled that concomitant treatment with both ganciclovir and didanosine can cause didanosine serum concentrations to be significantly increased.

HIV+ Patients with CMV Retinitis: Ganciclovir is not a cure for CMV retinitis, and immunocompromised patients may continue to experience progression of retinitis during or following treatment. Patients should be advised to have ophthalmologic follow-up examinations at a minimum of every 4 to 6 weeks while being treated with CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE. Some patients will require more frequent follow-up.

Transplant Recipients: Transplant recipients should be counseled regarding the high frequency of impaired renal function in transplant recipients who received CYTOTENE-IV solution in controlled clinical trials, particularly in patients receiving concomitant administration of nephrotoxic agents such as cyclosporine and amphotericin B. Although the specific mechanism of this toxicity, which in most cases was reversible, has not been determined, the higher rate of renal impairment in patients receiving CYTOTENE-IV solution compared with those who received placebo in the same trials may indicate that CYTOTENE-IV played a significant role.

Laboratory Testing: Due to the frequency of neutropenia, anemia and thrombocytopenia in patients receiving CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE (see ADVERSE EVENTS section), it is recommended that complete blood counts and platelet counts be performed frequently, especially in patients in whom ganciclovir or other nucleoside analogues have previously resulted in leukopenia or in whom neutrophil counts are less than 1000 cells/ μ L at the beginning of treatment. Increased serum creatinine levels have been observed in trials evaluating both CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE. Patients should have serum creatinine or creatinine clearance values monitored carefully to allow for dosage adjustments in renal impairment patients (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION section).

Drug Interactions: Didanosine: An oral dose of 1000 mg of CYTOTENE every 8 hours and didanosine, 200 mg every 12 hours, the steady-state didanosine AUC_{0-12} increased 111 \pm 114% (range: 10% to 85%) when didanosine was administered either 2 hours prior to or concurrent with administration of CYTOTENE (n=12 patients, 23 observations). A decrease in steady-state ganciclovir AUC of 21 \pm 17% (range: -44% to 5%) was observed when didanosine was administered 2 hours prior to administration of CYTOTENE, but ganciclovir AUC was not affected by the presence of didanosine when the two drugs were administered simultaneously (n=12). There were no significant changes in renal clearance for either drug.

When the standard intravenous ganciclovir infusion dose (5 mg/kg infused over 1 hour every 12 hours) was administered with didanosine at a dose of 200 mg orally every 12 hours, the steady-state didanosine AUC_{0-12} increased 70 \pm 40% (range: 3% to 121%, n=11) and C_{min} increased 49 \pm 48% (range: -28% to 125%). In a separate study, when the standard intravenous ganciclovir maintenance dose (5 mg/kg infused over 1 hour every 24 hours) was administered with didanosine at a dose of 200 mg orally every 12 hours, didanosine AUC_{0-12} increased 50 \pm 26% (range: 22% to 110%, n=11) and C_{min} increased 38 \pm 36% (range: -27% to 84%) over the first didanosine dosing interval. Didanosine plasma concentrations (AUC_{0-12}) were unchanged during the dosing intervals when ganciclovir was not administered. Ganciclovir pharmacokinetics were not affected by didanosine. In neither study were there significant changes in the renal clearance of either drug.

Zidovudine: At an oral dose of 1000 mg of CYTOTENE every 8 hours, mean steady-state ganciclovir AUC_{0-12} decreased 17 \pm 23% (range: -52% to 23%) in the presence of zidovudine, 100 mg every 4 hours (n=12). Steady-state zidovudine AUC_{0-12} increased 19 \pm 27% (range: -11% to 74%) in the presence of ganciclovir.

Since both zidovudine and ganciclovir have the potential to cause neutropenia and anemia, some patients may not tolerate concomitant therapy with these drugs at full dosage.

Probencid: At an oral dose of 1000 mg of CYTOTENE every 8 hours (n=10), ganciclovir AUC_{0-12} increased 53 \pm 91% (range: -14% to 299%) in the presence of probenecid, 500 mg every 6 hours. Renal clearance of ganciclovir decreased 22 \pm 20% (range: -54% to -4%), which is consistent with an interaction involving competition for renal tubular secretion.

CYTOTENE-IV (ganciclovir sodium for injection) and CYTOTENE® (ganciclovir capsules)

Imipenem-clastatin: Generalized seizures have been reported in patients who received ganciclovir and imipenem-clastatin. These drugs should not be used concomitantly unless the potential benefits outweigh the risks.

Other Medications: It is possible that drugs that inhibit replication of rapidly dividing cell populations such as bone marrow, spermatogonia and germinal layers of skin and gastrointestinal mucosa may have additive toxicity when administered concomitantly with ganciclovir. Therefore, drugs such as dapsone, pentamidine, flucytosine, vincristine, vinblastine, adriamycin, amphotericin B, trimethoprim/sulfamethoxazole combinations or other nucleoside analogues, should be considered for concomitant use with ganciclovir only if the potential benefits are judged to outweigh the risks.

No formal drug interaction studies of CYTOTENE-IV solution or CYTOTENE and drugs commonly used in transplant recipients have been conducted. Increases in serum creatinine were observed in patients treated with CYTOTENE-IV plus either cyclosporine or amphotericin B, drugs with known potential for nephrotoxicity (see ADVERSE EVENTS section). In a retrospective analysis of 93 liver allograft recipients receiving ganciclovir (5 mg/kg infused over 1 hour every 12 hours) and oral cyclosporine (at therapeutic doses), there was no evidence of an effect on cyclosporine whole blood concentrations.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis: Ganciclovir was carcinogenic in the mouse at oral doses of 20 and 1000 mg/kg/day (approximately 0.1x and 1.4x, respectively, the mean drug exposure in humans following the recommended intravenous dose of 5 mg/kg, based on area under the plasma concentration curve [AUC] comparisons). At the dose of 1000 mg/kg/day there was a significant increase in the incidence of tumors of the preputial gland in males, forestomach (nonpapillary mucosa) in males and females, and reproductive tissues (ovaries, uterus, mammary gland, clitoral gland and vagina) and liver in females. At the dose of 20 mg/kg/day, a slightly increased incidence of tumors was noted in the preputial and harden glands in males, forestomach in males and females, and liver in females. No carcinogenic effect was observed in mice administered ganciclovir at 1 mg/kg/day (estimated as 0.01x the human dose based on AUC comparison). Except for histiocytic sarcoma of the liver, ganciclovir-induced tumors were generally of epithelial or vascular origin. Although the preputial and clitoral glands, forestomach and harden glands of mice do not have human counterparts, ganciclovir should be considered a potential carcinogen in humans.

Ganciclovir increased mutations in mouse lymphoma cells and DNA damage in human lymphocytes in vitro at concentrations between 50 to 500 and 250 to 2000 μ M, respectively. In the mouse micronucleus assay, ganciclovir was clastogenic at doses of 150 and 500 mg/kg (IV) (2.8 to 10x human exposure based on AUC) but not 50 mg/kg (exposure approximately comparable to the human based on AUC). Ganciclovir was not mutagenic in the Ames Salmonella assay at concentrations of 500 to 5000 μ M.

Impairment of Fertility: Ganciclovir caused decreased mating behavior, decreased fertility, and an increased incidence of embryolethality in female mice following intravenous doses of 50 mg/kg/day (approximately 1.7x the mean drug exposure in humans following the dose of 5 mg/kg, based on AUC comparisons). Ganciclovir caused decreased fertility in male mice and hypospertogenesis in mice and dogs following daily oral or intravenous administration of doses ranging from 0.2 to 10 mg/kg. Systemic drug exposure (AUC) at the lowest dose showing toxicity in each species ranged from 0.03 to 0.1x the AUC of the recommended human intravenous dose.

Pregnancy: Category C. Ganciclovir has been shown to be embryotoxic in rabbits and mice following intravenous administration of 50 mg/kg/day and 108 mg/kg/day (2x the human exposure based on AUC comparisons), respectively. Effects observed in rabbits included: fetal growth retardation, embryolethality, teratogenicity and/or maternal toxicity. Teratogenic changes included cleft palate, anophthalmia/microphthalmia, aplastic organs (kidney and pancreas), hydrocephaly and brachygnathia. In mice, effects observed were maternal/fetal toxicity and embryolethality.

Only intravenous doses of 90 mg/kg administered to female mice prior to mating, during gestation, and during lactation caused hypoplasia of the testes and seminal vesicles in the month-old male offspring, as well as pathologic changes in the nonglandular region of the stomach (see Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis and Impairment of Fertility section). The drug exposure in mice as estimated by the AUC was approximately 1.7x the human AUC.

Ganciclovir may be teratogenic or embryotoxic at doses not recommended for human use. There are no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE should be used during pregnancy only if the potential benefits justify the potential risk to the fetus.

Footnote: All dose comparisons presented in the Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, Impairment of Fertility and Teratogenicity sections are based on the human AUC following administration of a single 5 mg/kg intravenous infusion of CYTOTENE-IV as used during the maintenance phase of treatment. Compared with the single 5 mg/kg intravenous infusion, human exposure is doubled during the intravenous induction phase (5 mg/kg bid) and approximately halved during maintenance treatment with CYTOTENE capsules (1000 mg tid). The cross-species dose comparisons should be divided by 2 for intravenous induction treatment with CYTOTENE-IV and multiplied by 2 for CYTOTENE capsules.

Nursing Mothers: It is not known whether ganciclovir is excreted in human milk. However, many drugs are excreted in human milk and, because carcinogenic and teratogenic effects occurred in animals treated with ganciclovir, the possibility of serious adverse reactions from ganciclovir in nursing infants is considered likely (see Pregnancy: Category C section). Mothers should be instructed to discontinue nursing if they are receiving CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE. The minimum interval before nursing can safely be resumed after the last dose of CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE is unknown.

Pediatric Use: SAFETY AND EFFICACY OF CYTOTENE-IV AND CYTOTENE IN CHILDREN HAVE NOT BEEN ESTABLISHED. THE USE OF CYTOTENE-IV OR CYTOTENE IN CHILDREN WARRANTS EXTREME CAUTION DUE TO THE PROBABILITY OF LONG-TERM CARCINOGENICITY AND REPRODUCTIVE TOXICITY. ADMINISTRATION TO CHILDREN SHOULD BE UNDERTAKEN ONLY AFTER CAREFUL EVALUATION AND ONLY IF THE POTENTIAL BENEFIT OF TREATMENT OUTWEIGHS THE RISK.

The spectrum of adverse events reported in 120 immunocompromised pediatric clinical trial participants with serious CMV infections receiving CYTOTENE-IV solution were similar to those reported in adults. Granulocytopenia (17%) and thrombocytopenia (10%) were the most common adverse events reported.

Sixteen children (6 months to 15 years of age) with life- or sight-threatening CMV infections were evaluated in an open-label CYTOTENE-IV solution pharmacokinetics study. Adverse events reported for more than 1 child were as follows: hypokalemia (4/16, 25%), abnormal kidney function (3/16, 19%), sepsis (3/16, 19%), thrombocytopenia (3/16, 19%), leukopenia (2/16, 13%), coagulation disorder (2/16, 13%), hypertension (2/16, 13%), pneumonia (2/16, 13%) and immune system disorder (2/16, 13%).

There has been very limited clinical experience using CYTOTENE-IV for the treatment of CMV retinitis in patients under the age of 12 years. Two children (ages 9 and 5 years) showed improvement or stabilization of retinitis for 23 and 9 months, respectively. These children received induction treatment with 2.5 mg/kg bid followed by maintenance therapy with 6 to 6.5 mg/kg once per day, 5 to 7 days per week. When retinitis progressed during once-daily maintenance therapy, both children were treated with the 5 mg/kg bid regimen. Two other children (ages 2.5 and 4 years) who received similar induction regimens showed only partial or no response to treatment. Another child, a 6-year-old with T-cell dysfunction, showed stabilization of retinitis for 3 months while receiving continuous infusions of CYTOTENE-IV at doses of 2 to 5 mg/kg/24 hours. Continuous infusion treatment was discontinued due to granulocytopenia.

Eleven of the 72 patients in the placebo-controlled trial in bone marrow transplant recipients were children, ranging from 3 to 10 years of age (5 treated with CYTOTENE-IV and 6 with placebo). Five of the pediatric patients treated with CYTOTENE-IV received 5 mg/kg intravenously bid for up to 7 days; 4 patients went on to receive 5 mg/kg of up to day 100 post-transplant. Results were similar to those observed in adult transplant recipients treated with CYTOTENE-IV. Two of the 6 placebo-treated pediatric patients developed CMV pneumonia, versus none of the 5 patients treated with CYTOTENE-IV. The spectrum of adverse events in the pediatric group was similar to that observed in the adult patients.

CYTOTENE capsules have not been studied in children under age 13.

Use in Patients with Renal Impairment: CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE should be used with caution in patients with impaired renal function because the half-life and plasma/serum concentrations of ganciclovir will be increased due to reduced renal clearance (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION AND ADVERSE EVENTS: Renal Toxicity sections).

Hemodialysis has been shown to reduce plasma levels of ganciclovir by approximately 50%.

Use in Elderly Patients: The pharmacokinetic profiles of CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE in elderly patients have not been established. Since elderly individuals frequently have a reduced glomerular filtration rate, particular attention should be paid to assessing renal function before and during administration of CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE (see DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION section).

ADVERSE EVENTS: Adverse events that occurred during clinical trials of CYTOTENE-IV solution and CYTOTENE capsules are summarized below, according to the participating study subject population.

Subjects with AIDS: Three controlled, randomized, phase 3 trials comparing CYTOTENE-IV and CYTOTENE capsules for maintenance treatment of CMV retinitis have been completed. During these trials, CYTOTENE-IV or CYTOTENE capsules were prematurely discontinued in 9% of subjects because of adverse events, new or worsening intercurrent illnesses, or laboratory abnormalities. In a placebo-controlled, randomized, phase 3 trial of CYTOTENE capsules for prevention of CMV disease in AIDS, treatment was prematurely discontinued because of adverse events, new or worsening intercurrent illness, or laboratory abnormalities in 19.5% of subjects treated with CYTOTENE capsules and 16% of subjects receiving placebo. Laboratory data and adverse events reported during the conduct of these controlled trials are summarized on next page.

Overall, in the treatment studies, subjects treated with CYTOTENE-IV solution experienced lower minimum ANC and hemoglobin levels, consistent with more neutropenia and anemia, compared with those who received CYTOTENE capsules. Serum creatinine elevations \geq 2.5 mg/dL occurred in $<$ 2% of all subjects, and no significant differences were noted in the time from the start of maintenance to the occurrence of elevations in serum creatinine values. In the prevention study, 20% of subjects treated with CYTOTENE capsules had maximum serum creatinine levels of 1.5 mg/dL or greater, compared to 15% on placebo ($p=0.013$). Of subjects in ganciclovir and placebo treatment groups, 24% and 20%, respectively, experienced creatinine elevations more than 25% over baseline levels.

Adverse Events: The following table shows selected adverse events reported in 5% or more of the subjects in three controlled clinical trials during treatment with either CYTOTENE-IV solution (5 mg/kg/day) or CYTOTENE capsules (3000 mg/day), and in one controlled clinical trial in which CYTOTENE capsules (3000 mg/day) were compared to placebo for the prevention of CMV disease.

Retinal Detachment: Retinal detachment has been observed in subjects with CMV retinitis both before and after initiation of therapy with ganciclovir. Its relationship to therapy with ganciclovir is unknown. Retinal detachment occurred in 11% of patients treated with CYTOTENE-IV solution and in 8% of patients treated with CYTOTENE capsules. Patients with CMV retinitis should have frequent ophthalmologic evaluations to monitor the status of their retinitis and to detect any other retinal pathology.

Transplant Recipients: There have been three controlled clinical trials of CYTOTENE-IV solution for the prevention of CMV disease in transplant recipients. Laboratory data and adverse events reported during these trials are summarized below.

In a placebo-controlled clinical trial conducted in heart allograft recipients (ICM 1496), more patients receiving CYTOTENE-IV solution had elevation of serum creatinine to values exceeding 2.5 mg/dL than patients receiving placebo (18% vs 4%, respectively). These increases in serum creatinine, up to 5.5 mg/dL in 1 patient, were transient and occurred primarily during the first week of treatment with CYTOTENE-IV solution. In a randomized, open-label study of CYTOTENE-IV solution in bone marrow allograft recipients (ICM 1570), more patients treated with CYTOTENE-IV solution experienced serum creatinine values exceeding 1.5 mg/dL than patients who were not treated (70% vs 35%, respectively). These elevations in serum creatinine, up to 3.2 mg/dL in 1 patient, were transient and occurred intermittently throughout the 3-month study. Most patients in these studies also received cyclosporine. In a second study in bone marrow transplant patients that was placebo-controlled (ICM 1689), no differences in elevations of serum creatinine were seen between the patients receiving CYTOTENE-IV solution and those receiving placebo. The mechanism of impairment of renal function is not known. However, careful monitoring of renal function during therapy with CYTOTENE-IV solution is essential, especially for those patients receiving concomitant agents that may cause nephrotoxicity.

General: Other adverse events that were thought to be "probably" or "possibly" related to CYTOTENE-IV solution or CYTOTENE capsules in clinical studies in either subjects with AIDS or transplant recipients are listed below. These events all occurred with a frequency of 1% or less unless otherwise noted.

Body as a Whole: abdominal enlarged, abscess, asthenia (6%), back pain, cellulitis, chest pain, chills and fever, drug level increased (ganciclovir), edema, face edema, headache (4%), injection site abscess, injection site edema, injection site hemorrhage, injection site inflammation (2%), injection site pain, injection site phlebitis, laboratory test abnormality, malaise, pain (2%), photosensitivity reaction, neck pain, neck rigidity.

Digestive System: abnormal liver function test (2%), aphthous stomatitis, constipation, dyspepsia (4%), dysphagia, eructation, esophagitis, fecal incontinence, gastritis, gastrointestinal hemorrhage, hepatitis, jaundice, melena, mouth ulceration, nausea and vomiting (2%), pancreatitis, tongue disorder.

Hemic and Lymphatic System: eosinophilia, hypochromic anemia, marrow depression, pancytopenia, splenomegaly.

Respiratory System: cough increased, dyspnea, pharyngitis.

Nervous System: abnormal dreams, abnormal gait, agitation, amnesia, anxiety, ataxia, coma, confusion, depression, dizziness, dry mouth (2%), emotional lability, euphoria, hypertension, hyperkinesia, hyperesthesia, insomnia (2%), libido decreased, manic reaction, myoclonus, nervousness, psychosis, seizures, somnolence, thinking abnormal, tremor, trismus (Overall, probably or possibly related neurologic system events occurred in approximately 5% of patients).

Skin and Appendages: acne, alopecia, dry skin, fixed eruption, maculopapular rash, skin discoloration, urticaria, vesiculobullous rash.

Special Senses: abnormal vision, amblyopia, blindness, conjunctivitis, deafness, ear pain, eye pain, glaucoma, photophobia, taste perversion, tinnitus.

Metabolic and Nutritional Disorders: alkaline phosphatase increased, creatinine increased, creatine phosphokinase increased, decreased blood sugar, hyperglycemia, hypokalemia, increased blood urea nitrogen (BUN), lactic dehydrogenase increased, SOD increased, SGPT increased, weight loss (2%).

Cardiovascular System: arrhythmia, deep thrombophlebitis, hypertension, hypotension, migraine, plebilitis (2%), vasodilatation.

Urogenital System: breast pain, creatinine clearance decreased, hematuria, impotence, kidney failure, kidney function abnormal, urinary frequency, urinary tract infection.

Musculoskeletal System: arthralgia, bone pain, leg cramps, myalgia, myasthenia.

The following adverse events reported in patients receiving ganciclovir may be potentially fatal: pancreatitis, sepsis and multiple organ failure.

Adverse Events Reported During Postmarketing Experience with CYTOTENE-IV: Listed below are adverse events reported spontaneously since the marketing introduction of CYTOTENE-IV that have not been included previously based on experience during clinical trials. These events have been reported infrequently, and data are insufficient to estimate an incidence at which they have occurred or to establish a relationship to ganciclovir use. These events may have occurred as part of an underlying disease process and do not necessarily represent the type, severity or prevalence of adverse events occurring in clinical practice. These voluntary reports include: acidosis, allergic reaction, anaphylactic reaction, arthritis, bronchospasm, cardiac arrest, cardiac conduction abnormality, cardiac, cholelithiasis, congenital anomaly, dry eyes, dysphasia, dysplasia, elevated triglyceride levels, encephalopathy, exfoliative dermatitis, extrapyramidal reaction, facial palsy, hallucinations, hemolytic anemia, hepatic failure, hepatitis, hypocalcemia, inappropriate serum ADH, intensity, intestinal ulceration, intracranial hypertension, irritability, loss of memory, loss of sense of smell, myelopathy, perforated intestine, peripheral ischemia, pulmonary tuberculosis, rhabdomyolysis, Stevens-Johnson syndrome, stroke, testicular hypotrophy, Torsades de Pointes, vasculitis, ventricular tachycardia.

OVERDOSAGE: CYTOTENE-IV: Overdosage with CYTOTENE-IV has been reported in 17 patients (13 adults and 4 children under 2 years of age). Five patients experienced no adverse events following overdosage at the following doses: 7 doses of 11 mg/kg over a 3-day period (adult), single dose of 3500 mg (adult), single dose of 500 mg (72.5 mg/kg) followed by 48 hours of peritoneal dialysis (4-month-old), single dose of approximately 60 mg/kg followed by exchange transfusion (18-month-old), 2 doses of 500 mg instead of 31 mg (1-month-old).

Irreversible pancytopenia developed in 1 adult with AIDS and CMV colitis after receiving 3000 mg of CYTOTENE-IV solution on each of 2 consecutive days. He experienced worsening GI symptoms and acute renal failure that required short-term dialysis. Pancytopenia developed and persisted until his death from a malignancy several months later. Other adverse events reported following overdosage included: persistent bone marrow suppression (1 adult with neutropenia and thrombocytopenia after a single dose of 6000 mg), reversible neutropenia or granulocytopenia (4 adults, overdoses ranging from 8 mg/kg daily for 4 days to a single dose of 25 mg/kg), hepatitis (1 adult receiving 10 mg/kg daily, and one 2 kg infant after a single 40 mg dose), renal toxicity (1 adult with transient worsening of hematuria after a single 500 mg dose, and 1 adult with elevated creatinine (5.2 mg/dL) after a single 5000 to 7000 mg dose), and seizure (1 adult with known seizure disorder after 3 days of 9 mg/kg). In addition, 1 adult received 0.4 mL (instead of 0.1 mL) of CYTOTENE-IV solution by intrathecal injection, and experienced temporary loss of vision and central retinal artery occlusion secondary to increased intracranial pressure related to the injected fluid volume.

CYTOTENE Capsules: There have been no reports of overdosage with CYTOTENE capsules. Doses as high as 6000 mg/day, given either as 1000 mg 6 times daily or as 2000 mg tid, did not result in overt toxicity other than transient neutropenia. Daily doses of more than 6000 mg have not been studied.

Since ganciclovir is dialyzable, dialysis may be useful in reducing serum concentrations. Adequate hydration should be maintained. The use of hematopoietic growth factors should be considered.

CYTOTENE-IV for intravenous infusion manufactured by Warner-Lambert Company, Morris Plains, NJ 07950 and CYTOTENE Capsules for oral administration manufactured by Syntex Puerto Rico, Inc., Humacao, Puerto Rico 00791.

OUT THERE

by Chris Culwell and Pithy Galore

From the GLAAD office this week we've learned that comedian Ellen DeGeneres, otherwise known as Superditherer, will be one of the glittering celebrities scheduled to appear at the 8th Annual GLAAD Media Awards, set for March 16 in LA (ceremonies will also be held in New York and Washington, DC). Hmmmm. Are we to take DeGeneres' appearance at the GLAAD Awards as confirmation of something she has yet to publicly admit, or is this just Chapter 10,001 in the ongoing and now exceedingly tedious Is-She-Or-Isn't-She Game? Also on the guest list for the GLAAD Awards is, amazingly, Lily Tomlin, AKA Superditherer II.

Flash: the latest news on the DeGeneres coming out episode, airing April 30, is that Laura Dern will play the love interest who convinces Ellen to come out.

Marathon of masturbators

Fresh out of ideas about what to do in the month of May? Well, those sweet folks at Good Vibrations, San Francisco's legendary sex toy, book and video store, have a suggestion: masturbate. Yes, for the second consecutive year, GV has declared the month of May National Masturbation Month, and to get folks in the spirit of things the GV staff has put together a calendar of "exciting activities" devoted to celebrating onanism. The kick-off event is a "Salute to Masturbation" video screening on May 8 at the Roxie Cinema, in which attendees will be regaled with clips of memorable masturbation scenes from X-rated and educational videos. The event will be hosted by Miss Masturbation herself, Carol Queen.

To keep people in the spirit of things throughout the month, each Good Vibrations store will showcase a "Masturbators' Hall of Fame" that will honor those brave celebrities who have been willing to stand up in support of masturbation, namely: Dennis Rodman, Cybill Shepherd, Bruce Willis, Madonna, the Artist Formerly Known as Prince, Seinfeld, Roseanne, and, of course, Dr. Joycelyn Elders.

Finally, GV is hoping everyone will participate in their "Top 10 People To Masturbate To Contest," in which folks are being asked to send in their list of the top 10 people they think about while practicing the art of self-love. A random drawing will determine winners of the contest, who will receive $100 gift certificates to Good Vibrations. For more information about National Masturbation Month, call Good Vibrations at 974-8980.

Prime wanker

One person missing from Good Vibrations' "Masturbators' Hall of Fame" is British actress Helen Mirren, star of the acclaimed Some Mother's Son and PBS detective series, Prime Suspect. In a recent edition of New York's Time Out magazine, Mirren told interviewer Stephan Talty, "There's nothing wrong with a good wank every now and then," a statement she underscored with a laugh and the "cock of an eyebrow."

Mirren made her confession while discussing her taste in porn. "I much prefer Hustler to Playboy," she told Talty, "because at least Hustler is not hypocritical. Hustler is a wanker's magazine — get that sperm out, get it over and done with."

Fans of Prime Suspect will be disheartened to learn that Prime Suspect 5 was the last installment of the series. When asked if she thought there might be a reunion down the road, Mirren suggested it wasn't out of the question, but added, "I want people to think — especially me to think — that I've moved on to something else."

Writer's block

magazine piece, Andrew Sullivan asked the question, What do we write about when AIDS ends?, a query inspired by recent positive developments in the protease inhibitor-led war on AIDS. Sullivan's question was reiterated in last Sunday's Examiner by Bill Hayes, who confessed that turning the corner on the AIDS epidemic might translate for him as the loss of his "best material."

Well, literary friends, in case you haven't noticed, there's no shortage of things in this universe to write about, though we understand the difficulty of seeing the obvious if one's head is ensconced up one's own butt. Frankly, gentlemen, we don't care what you write about as long as you stop writing about yourselves.

No accident

If media mogul Ted Turner had really been serious about wanting to put the kibosh on David Cronenberg's film Crash, he would have kept his big mouth shut and let the film go the way of most art movies, i.e. oblivion. But as it stands now, Turner's Morning-in-America-style denouncement of Crash late last year has only succeeded in focusing an enormous spotlight on this singular film about the human fascination with death and the eroticization of danger.

In the film, when James Ballard (James Spader) survives a near-fatal car accident with Dr. Helen Remington (Holly Hunter), he suddenly becomes fascinated with the odd propinquity between danger, sex, and death. Ballard and Remington — now a couple — then become involved with a stranger (Elias Koteas) who calls himself the "nightmare angel of the highways," and whose own obsession with the erotic possibilities of car wrecks is so notorious he is appointed leader of a car crash cult whose members get off on watching test-collision films and reenacting famous car crashes.

In an interview in a British film journal Cronenberg said of the film, "It's a dangerous film in many ways. It does violence to people's understanding of human relationships and does violence to people's understanding of eroticism. But I think that's a primary function of art, to do violence to the little cocoon that we sometimes find ourselves enveloped in."

Ironically, while Turner called the film "offensive and sick," the powers-that-be at the 1996 Cannes Film Festival awarded Crash a Special Jury Prize for "originality, daring, and audacity." Of course, the French have such a category. Crash opens here Friday, March 21.

LVC comin' our way

If you read that charming piece about San Francisco in the New York Times travel section last week, then you probably already know that the opening night feature of this year's SF International Film Festival (April 24 through May 8) is the long-awaited film version of Terrence McNally's Love Valour Compassion, a by turns comic and heartwarming tale of eight gay friends who gather to love, laugh and care for one another over the course of three summer weekends in Upstate New York. The film, directed by debuting film director Joe Mantello, who also directed the Tony Award-winning stage version of the play, stars most of the original Broadway cast, including Randy Becker, John Glover, Stephen

Jason Alexander

Spinella, Stephen Bogardus and Justin Kirk. Seinfeld star Jason Alexander will play the role of Buzz. If you miss LVC at this year's SFIFF, you can see the film when it opens in commercial release in May.

Coming to the Castro

A while back we moaned in print about not being able to see the comprehensive Fassbinder retrospective that played NYC's MOMA last month and which is currently screening in LA. No sooner did we get into print with that lament than Castro Theatre Programmer Anita Monga called to let us know that the Fassbinder showcase will be coming to the Castro Theatre in late July and early August, right after the Jewish Film Festival. There are 45 features (and some shorts) in all, including several Fassbinder films never before seen in the U.S.

Peter Brandenhoff

B is for beautiful

Many's the time we've nearly dropped our lorgnette at the sight of San Francisco Ballet dancer Peter Brandenhoff bounding across the stage in gluteal region-enhancing tights. Well, if that's the effect of seeing the dancer from a distance, you can only imagine what it's like seeing him up close. Indeed, the Brandenhoff created something of a sensation when he walked into the Cowell Theatre several weeks ago for the Focus Achievement Awards accompanied by colleague and gal-pal Elizabeth Loscavio. Heads turned and martinis were spilled as queens and het females alike began boiling over at the sight of this curly-haired beauty with the dancing eyes, the unaffected smile, and the cheekbones of a Michelangelo fantasy.

"Isn't he one of us?" a rueful queen in purple queried. Alas, no, but we can dream, can't we? Doubtless, reverie will abound this Sunday (March 9, 2 p.m.) at the Center for the Arts, when Mr. Brandenhoff performs — shirtless — in San Francisco Ballet's Shogun. Ivonne Satie's scintillating duet for two male dancers. Last week, arts reporter Stephanie von Buchau wrote of the piece, "It passes from macho titillation to gender-bending deliriousness when the two guys whip golden fans from their waistbands and fall over each other in orgasmic bliss." For tickets, call the SFB box office at 865-2000.

Franz Schubert

Was he or wasn't he?

In a recent issue of The New Yorker, Alex Ross weighed the question of Franz Schubert's alleged homosexuality. Some evidence, Ross wrote, suggests an ongoing affair between the composer and a "misogynistic, reclusive, morose, and in all likelihood homosexual poet" named Johann Mayrhofer when Schubert was in his mid-20s. Ross observes that during a brief period in which the two shared an apartment in Vienna, Schubert set a fair number of Mayrhofer's poems to music, and that "something peculiarly unsettled" in the music mirrors both the character of the poet and the composer. Mayrhofer and Schubert even collaborated on an unfinished opera, Adrast, which is unique, according to Ross, because it may "contain one of the few same-sex love arias in opera."

The debate over Schubert's sexuality heated up in 1989, when biographer and musicologist Maynard Solomon published a coruscating essay entitled, "Franz Schubert and the Peacocks of Benvenuto Cellini," which suggests the composer was not only gay but was instrumental in creating a queer avant-garde in Vienna. Schubert's birthplace. Solomon based his theory not only on the Mayrhofer relationship but on entries in Schubert's diaries that related the composer's being "indifferent to the charms of the fair sex" and having "a dominating aversion for the daughters of Eve." Solomon was further convinced of the composer's lavender leanings by an entry in the diary of one of Schubert's contemporaries, Eduard von Bauernfeld, who wrote that "Schubert is half sick (he needs 'young peacocks,' like Benvenuto Cellini)." Peacocks, Solomon had observed, was Cellini's encoded expression for young homosexuals with whom he'd had his way.

Of course, no one will ever know for sure the truth of the composer's sexual preference, and though it ultimately doesn't matter either, it's interesting to speculate how the outsider status of the homosexual may have served as muse to this gifted genius. ▼

J.D. Cerna as Jack Gudmanson in Mark Christopher's Alkali, Iowa.

Boys Life 2

◀ Arts cover

Nickolas Perry's slick, colorful Must Be the Music opens the show. The setting is the sacred space of the disco, and the players are a group of four teenage pals — three gay and one straight — out for a night on the town, and sex if they're lucky. While the film lacks dramatic punch, Perry's prowling camera captures the fluid sexuality and tribalism of teenage dance culture and the backbiting among the boys as two of them vie for the favors of an alluring trick.

Mega-hunk Vincent D'Onofrio is familiar from the recent critical favorite — and box-office disaster — The Whole Wide World, in which he played a sexually repressed pulp writer. In Tom DeCerio's Nunzio's Second Cousin, he's Sgt. Tony Randozza, a studly cop whose street-corner make-out session with his black leather queen boyfriend is interrupted by a group of teenage gay-bashers. To their dismay, he whips out a gun, loudly degrades them, then orders Jimmy (Miles Perlich) to come to his house the following night for what might or might not be a forced fuck. Director DeCerio milks the black humor here — on their "date," Sgt. Tony waves a big salami in his face and bellows, "I bet you thought I invited you here to fuck you in the ass!" — but also subtly, and surprisingly, undercuts our sympathy for Sgt. Tony by humanizing the basher. Eileen Brennan adds spice as his cackling, clueless mother.

Unlike the first two shorts, Mark Christopher's brilliantly measured Alkali, Iowa has the enticingly rough look of an authentic independent film. A young farmer, Jack Gudmanson (J.D. Cerna), accidentally discovers his dead father was gay. A middle-aged queen named "Blondie" (Kent Broadhurst) mysteriously appears with ritualistic regularity at the edge of the Gudmanson property, but is driven off by Jack's rabidly homophobic grandfather. The film subtly pulls together the threads of a hidden gay identity — both father's and son's — as Jack is lured to a cruisy meadow, confronts Blondie, and puts on the army uniform of his handsome father, whom we see smiling cryptically in faux 8mm footage. Christopher shows enormous skill in implying a vast realm of experience just outside the cinematic frame, and we can only hope that he gets the money to turn this into a feature film.

The crowning work in Boys Life 2 is Peggy Rajski's dazzling Trevor, which earned an Academy Award for Best Live Action Short in 1994. The usual "Afterschool Special" clichés about Sensitive Youth are gently mocked in this black-comic look at a 13-year-old boy coming to terms with his homosexuality.

Trevor (Brett Barsky) is a chubby drama queen obsessed with Diana Ross and his straight best friend. His moods vary from pompous self-recriminations ("I'm a pest too horrible to think about!") to starry-eyed yearnings for romance, but he's always charming and articulate. His mock-suicides are clever send-ups of theatrical teenage angst, particularly when he lies in a bathtub, a towel around his head, spots of stage blood on the floor, and a single white feather in his limp hand. Trevor's words have the authentic ring of a precocious teen — "We looked at his sperm under a microscope and saw a lot of crazy activity!" — and his eventual coming out is sweet satisfaction indeed. ▼

Boys Life 2 plays March 7 through 13 at the Castro Theatre.

Two students practice the arts of love in Mira Nair's overwrought Kama Sutra: A Tale of Love.

Kama Sutra: unconscious camp

by Gary Morris

In some quarters, fidelity in translating one art form into another is considered an end in itself and thus is highly prized. Director Mira Nair's Kama Sutra, a cheesy version of a classic Hindu love manual, is being touted as a faithful adaptation, but that may be its only virtue. The director of Salaam Bombay started showing signs of aesthetic dismissippi Masala and The Perez Family, but nothing in those movies could have prepared us for this mangy dog.

The film centers on a childhood rivalry that extends into adulthood between upper-class snob Tara (Sarita Choudhury) and her lower-class playmate Maya (Indira Varma). Tara is set to marry "the king," Raj Singh (Naveen Andrews), when Maya secretly fucks her friend's intended. Banished from the palace, Maya wanders off to a sort of sex school, where she is taught some of the positions all of us remember from the blacklight poster days of the '60s. Since there are no men at the school, the gals practice on each other, so we at least get a few scenes of lesbian liplocking and mock-screwing. Tara meets her "true love," a court sculptor named Jai (Ramon Tikaram), a long-haired mini-stud with whom she swaps such blandishing profundities as, "honor and shame are two sides of the same coin!"

Kama Sutra has the seamy plushness of a Hugh Hefner production; indeed, it follows the Playboy aesthetic to the letter in employing both male and female nudity. Yet, while you'd expect equal time for men and women in what is billed as a cinematic sex manual, the camera seems most interested in female anatomy, largely ignoring the fetching king and the endearing, zany little Jai. Poor as it is, the filmmakers shouldn't despair—the film will surely have a limited afterlife on the midnight movie circuit as unconscious camp. ▼ family and strike out on an entirely new path in life. The decision-making process behind their choices is a classic and hilarious distillation of clueless humanity.

Kama Sutra opens March 7 at the Bridge Theatre and elsewhere in the Bay Area.

The script for Waiting for Guffman, written by Guest and Levy, is a paradigm of successful parody. It is a quintessential portrayal of Midwestern foibles in the farcical tradition of Molière – without all the door slamming.

The film's greatest success is probably Guest's creation of Corky St. Clair, the swishy, small-town queen who is respected by the yokels because he spent ten years living in Manhattan and, ipso facto, is very talented and artistic. Wisely, the film never acknowledges Corky's sexual inclination, but Guest's portrayal remains pregnant with homosexual possibilities. One character innocently observes that Corky is married (he wears a wedding band), but no one has ever seen or heard from his wife. And when Corky goes to the local garage to recruit hunky mechanic Johnny Savage for his cast, the hidden agenda requires no explanation.

Corky St. Clair, a character that could be offensive to gay people, manages to avoid the potential pitfalls. Yes, Corky sports a Dutch-boy haircut and a goatee, and he wears flamboyant outfits that even the Artist Formerly Known as Prince could not get away with. But the recognition factor will run high for anyone who has known a poorly educated, minimally talented, star-struck queer who gave up the Big City and returned to the rural closet. Christopher Guest's creation is not mean-spirited; his Corky is more archetype than stereotype.

The faux documentary has a certain limited appeal, especially when directors like Michael Moore (Roger and Me) and Errol Morris (Gates of Heaven) can produce the real thing with just as much humor and even more insight. The genre can also veer toward a smug self-consciousness – witness Dirk Shafer's recent vain-glorious centerfold opus, Man of the Year. But with Waiting for Guffman, Christopher Guest sticks close to the tone of Reiner's This Is Spinal Tap; the result is an amusing trifle, worthy of a Saturday afternoon goof. ▼

15th Asian American Film Festival attracts work by queer filmmakers from India, China, Japan and Korea.

by Gary Morris

There is no better example than the United States of a dominant culture imposing narrow definitions on those who live outside the sacred circles of power. In this demonizing process, union workers are denounced as lazy opportunists, the poor are labeled as evil welfare leeches, and immigrants are branded as bloodsuckers on the body politic. Asians have long been victims of this phenomenon, with Western attitudes toward them circumscribed by hoary images of submissive geishas, treacherous "Japs," and opium-smoking "Chinamen." America is arguably in a transition period with regard to such imagery — since it's no longer acceptable to portray Asian people in traditionally racist ways, they're simply no longer employed as actors. (Some will recall the brouhaha several years ago over the play Miss Saigon, when quite reasonable objections to white "yellowface" actors caused the producers to shut down the U.S. production rather than employ real Asian actors.)

Large-scale events like the 15th Asian American Film Festival are crucial in helping the culture shift from this disturbing silence to a more inclusionary phase, where Asian faces can be seen and Asian voices heard. To this end, the festival has brought together a cho-

For some of these filmmakers, defining the self requires a look into the netherworld of the family. In Private Wars (Philippines, 1996), director Nick Deocampo attempts to locate his missing father, a former communist guerrilla and abusive drunk. What is fascinating in this sometimes too sentimental work is the recreation of Deocampo's childhood terror rus of voices not only from the U.S., but from places as far away as Mongolia, Korea, India, China, and Japan. For good measure, several gay and lesbian features and shorts programs have been thrown into the mix.

Autobiography, the simple act of self-declaration, is an automatic challenge to the status quo, and many of the works in this showcase mine this rich vein. In the shorts program Queer Potion #9, Margarita Alcantara's Fuckin' Chink (U.S., 1996) uses a riot grrrl sensibility to put to rest the fantasy of submissive "Oriental" women. The central character strikes a memorable note when she pithily denounces her childhood harassers, "who were white and ignorant as fuck." In Christopher's Chronicles (U.S., 1997), transgendered director Christopher Lee reminds us of the home truth that can never be said too often: "You are the biologist!" In both films, transformation comes about through action. The commodification of the Asian woman is explored in David Kalal's brilliant deconstruction Love Song for Persis K (U.S., 1995); the title refers to Indian actress and model Persis Khambata, a familiar face from Star Trek: The Motion Picture.

of the man who "drove me to assume another character by dressing in mother's clothes" — a fantastic affirmation of the mystical power of the trappings of the female body. Lindsey Merrison's Our Burmese Days (Germany/U.K., 1996) examines another parent-child relationship in the director's search for the meaning in his mother's hidden history as a mixed-race woman who "passed."

More affirmative female imagery is found in a less obvious place — the silent film. Legendary actress Ruan Lingyu committed suicide in 1935 at age 25, but her presence resonates powerfully in Bu Wancang's tragic Love and Duty (China, 1931). Ruan joins the ranks of world-class actresses like Giulietta Masina and Kinuyo Tanaka in a daring portrayal that takes her from a radiant, smiling schoolgirl to a wretched, crooked-toothed old hag. Watch for the chubby, evil queen butler who helps engineer her fall.

Films by and for women

Another seemingly inhospitable realm is the notoriously patriarchal Indian film. But Deepa Mehta, director of Fire (India, 1996), says Indian authorities took no notice of her controversial lesbian film because they were busy with Mira Nair's lurid Kama Sutra, also shot in India. In Fire, we meet two women, Radha (superstar Shabana Azmi), the traditional subservient wife; and Sita (Nandita Das), a younger woman with new ideas. Sita's boredom with the terms of marriage — "This devotion thing is overrated," she says flatly — dovetails with the increasing alienation Radha experiences as the result of her marriage. The film shows lesbianism in a way rarely seen in the West or the East — as an enticing alternative to the tedium of heterosexual relations. A younger generation of women is featured in Girls Like Us (U.S., 1997): Directors Jane C. Wagner and Tina DiFelicianantonio interviewed four girls in South Philadelphia over a four-year period, from ages 14 to 18. In describing the limits and possibilities of their lives, they create an unforgettable picture of society at large. Most disturbing is the fate of one of the girls' friends, a Vietnamese-American named Chevtien, whose father throws her out on the street when she "disgraces" them by going out with a boy.

The voices of gays and lesbians in mainland China are finally heard in Wang Feng and Gary China." The title is Their Lives, suggesting that the word "homosexual" has an incantatory power that must be suppressed.

Two films are noteworthy for sheer visual artistry. Xie Fei's A Mongolian Tale (Mongolia/China, 1996), shot in the gorgeous Mongolian grasslands, extrapolates universal themes in a story of hopes dashed by time and distance. Labyrinth of Dreams (Japan, 1997) has the look of classic Japanese cinema. Its velvety blacks and gleaming whites beautifully articulate the melancholia of this existential crime drama.

High art and politics

The festival also takes notice of the achievement of Asians in the area of high art. Peter Rosen's First Person Singular: I.M. Pei (U.S., 1997) lets the architect who renovated the Louvre tell his life story in his own words. Hiro Narita's Isamu Noguchi: Stones and Paper (U.S., 1997) situates the artist in a variety of settings — as a student of Brancusi in Paris, as part of the New York avant garde, alone in his studio in Japan. Noguchi described himself as one of "that increasing number of not-exactly-belonging people," and this documentary shows how he turned the freedom that phrase suggests into lasting art.

Less artful, and only intermittently successful, is aging enfant terrible Quentin Lee and Justin Lin's Shopping for Fangs (Canada/U.S., 1997). This uneasy mix of genres — werewolves, urban crime, comedy, and obsession — culminates in an amusing John Woo-style standoff between a Brigitte Lin lookalike in blond wig and sunglasses and a murderous, pumped-up thug.

On a more political note are works like Antonio A. Montanari, Jr.'s U.S.A. vs. Tokyo Rose (U.S., 1995), which shows how one of America's mythical monsters was railroaded; and Janet Gardner's A World Beneath the War (U.S., 1996), a chilling Vietnam War documentary that uses recently unearthed footage from North Vietnam showing the survival strategies of villagers in one of the world's poorest, most beleaguered countries.

Political consciousness also permeates the work of Jang Sun Woo, a Korean director who warrants wider exposure. The standout in the six-film retrospective in this festival is his most recent work, A Petal (Korea, 1996). Jang is unnerving in his refusal to soften the events he describes, which are based on a 1980 massacre of civilian protesters by the Korean government. He starts with graphic documentary footage from this episode, then switches to the grim tale of an unnamed 15-year-old girl (Jung Hyun) who somehow extricates herself from the piles of dead bodies, only to be raped repeatedly by a laborer. The director connects her fate with that of Korea in a series of harrowing scenes, and expands the dramatic dimension by including animated sequences. Jang Sun Woo's is one of many voices celebrated in this festival that isn't likely to be heard elsewhere. Like the others here, it's a voice that deserves to be heard. ▼

Festivals like this are crucial in helping the culture shift into a more inclusive phase.

Fabulous desecrations

Showqueens sully the classics

by Chad Jones

Everything about the musical revue Dirty Little Showtunes makes this perhaps the gayest show ever to play San Francisco. All the great queer stereotypes are hauled out for laughs by Seattle lyricist Tom Orr, everything from leather daddies and drag queens to rainbow flags and public lice. But the real clincher is this: every song is a newly retooled Broadway showtune. Things just can't get any gay without imploding and exploding simultaneously.

Lyricist Orr, who also heads the all-male cast of six, knows his showtunes. Endless Broadway insider jokes make this a showqueen's delight, though the show's great triumph is that even the non-Broadway enthusiasts — all 12 of you — will find plenty to laugh about in Dirty's lampooning of gay life, all of which has been directed with great verve by Allen Sawyer and John F. Karr.

The first act is comprised of six men singing about all things gay. Two pajama-clad lovers (a la The Pajama Game) croon their version of Disney's "A Whole New World" called "A Perfect World," in which families love and support their gay and lesbian children's relationships and even grandma has nice things to say about them. Then, the recently separated Bob and Rod Jackson-Paris get creamed in a new version of an Irving Berlin number retitled, "Mr. Monogamy." Divas Judy and Barbra are, of course, included in the fun, but in an interesting way. What was written as a duet for Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme and John Hinckley, Jr. in Sondheim's Assassins becomes a hilarious plea for the love of Jason Gould and Joey Luft — the sons of Barbra and Judy respectively — called "I Am Unworthy of Your Son."

"Fugue for Tin horns" from Guys and Dolls becomes a paean to porn for a trio and A Chorus Line's "At the Ballet" becomes a tender reminiscence called "At the Bathhouse." "Bye-Bye Birdie" is a wonderfully staged tangle of phone-sex participants and, in one of the show's best numbers, "Over the Rainbow" becomes an anti-rainbow anthem. "Somewhat over the rainbow, lambdas too," croons the capitalism-saturated queer. The meaning of the pink triangle has been lost, he insists. "How do key chains and beach towels link to the Holocaust?"

Lyricist Tom Orr.

Orr and his cast-mates — Birdie-Bob Watt, Trauma Flintstone, David Bicha, Eric Brizee, and Randy Wendelin — really get going early in the second act, when the drag queens (Watt, Flintstone, and Bicha) battle over turf with the leather daddies (Orr, Brizee, and Wendelin). The duel leads to — you guessed it — "The Rumble" from West Side Story, then speeds into the peace-making process with an altered number from Oklahoma! called "The Leatherman and the Drag Queen Should Be Friends."

With the deft musical direction and piano accompaniment of Scrumby Koldewyn, the handsome and nicely appointed set by Dana Peter Porras, and the humorous if not terribly challenging choreography by Ney Fonseca, the evening is first-class all the way. Some showtune aficionados may grumble about their sacred art being desecrated by the rabble-raising homos, but it's all in good fun and proves the veracity of the old adage that there's no queen like a showqueen. ▼

PERFORMANCE

Black & white together

by Deborah Peifer

For about 15 minutes early in 1967, it seemed possible, at least to an astonishingly naive gang of civil rights and anti-war activists, that racism was on the verge of being overcome. Of course, this was two years before Stonewall, so equal rights for gays and lesbians wasn't in that idealistic picture. Women were excluded as well, and told that our only position in the revolution was prone (presumably the boys meant supine, but prone is what they said), so I'm not suggesting that Nirvana was in the offing. But it seemed that a real effort was being made to reach across generations of color boundaries. A few months later, Dr. King was murdered, America's cities exploded in rage, and the chance for a peaceful meeting was lost.

Thirty years later, a generation later, the opinions of certain Proposition 209 supporters to the contrary notwithstanding, racism continues to destroy the haters and the rest of us. It would seem, given our own history of being discriminated against based on sexual orientation or gender, that lesbians at least would be able to get past racism. Would that it were so. In an effort to address the very real issues around racism in the lesbian communities, Luna Sea Women's Performance Project is presenting Skin: The Black and White of It, an original production of dance, music and theatre pieces written and performed by a company of African-American and white women. The short songs, dances, and scenes performed in Skin reflect the experiences around racism of the writers and performers. In short, it is real life made theatrical.

Rhodesa Jones (pictured), co-director of Skin, is a 48-year-old actor, dancer, singer, writer, and teacher. Her work with incarcerated women in The Medea Project several years ago brought the stories of these women to the attention of audiences world-wide. Jones sees her ability "to hone work based on disparate women's real lives" as a real plus on this particular project. "My expertise," she says, "lies in politicizing the work."

The women involved in this project are considerably younger than Jones and she is constantly asking them, "Do you know that people fought and died for you so that you could be on stage tonight talking about your love for women?" Jones wants to give "space to young people to experiment, to find ways to change this world. We have to be mindful of younger people," she says. "They're from the future." ▼

Tango machismo

Thick Description's 'Blade to the Heat'

by Chad Jones

There's an Academy Award-nominated documentary about Muhammed Ali and the world of boxing in theaters right now which just happens to coincide with the appearance of an award-winning play about a gay boxer in the 1950s. The play, by Oliver Mayer, is called Blade to the Heat, a suitably pulpy title for its meaty subject matter, but perhaps a more timely title might be When We Were Queens.

This production of Blade by Thick Description — a theater company of reliable edginess (The America Play, Santos & Santos) — is masterful in its technique, even if it comes up a little short in its final one-two punch. Playwright Mayer ultimately lets down his actors and production team as the play's second act slowly sinks into maudlin, pretentiously arty verbosity. As directed by Tony Kelly, though, Blade to the Heat has a crafty energy that keeps interest level high even if the play goes down for the count.

In one corner of this drama is Pedro Quinn (Joseph Pacheco Ponce), a young up-and-comer trying to make it in the competitive world of Los Angeles boxing in 1959. In addition to being Mexican-American, Pedro is also a homosexual. In the other corner is Mantecilla Decima (L. Peter Callender), a fiercely proud Cuban boxer whose cockiness and fiery pride have made him champion. When Quinn dethrones Decima, trouble follows in the form of self-interested boxer and troublemaker Wilfred Vinal (Noel Benzoza), who raises the flag of "faggot" while in the ring with Decima. Vinal's accusations — created only to mess with the minds of his opponents and propel his own career — don't stick to Decima, but with the impressive Quinn it's another story.

Quinn's emergence as a champion coincides with his emergence as a sexual being. The boxer's attraction to Garnet (Colman Domingo), a gay man who impersonates Jackie Wilson for a living, provides Blade to the Heat with its most intriguing dramatic elements. Garnet's occasional Jackie Wilson performances and his gradual romance with the enigmatic Quinn keep this play from becoming just another fag-bashing athletic tale.

Before the play becomes overloaded with symbolism about dead dogs and loneliness, Mayer's script is interesting and insightful. Quinn tries to describe the sensation of fighting in the ring to Garnet, who is new to the world of boxing, if not the world of violence: "It's weird getting hit. You feel so alive. That's the thing. It doesn't last." There are also glimpses into the tortured psyche of the gay boxer when the slimy Vinal points out that a closet case loves the fight because of the physical proximity to another sweaty man all the while receiving a battering punishment for being attracted to that sweaty man.

Blade's cast is uniformly strong, offering full-blooded interpretations of characters that could too easily become stereotypes. Pacheco Ponce's fragile but brutal Quinn is at once isolated in his emotional shell and stinging when he's pushed to lash out at the world. Domingo's sassy Garnet delivers some spot-on Jackie Wilson moves and emerges as the play's only emotionally independent soul. Everyone else is too wrapped up in the brutality of the sport to see the forest through the trees.

The non-human star of the production is Richard Olmsted's brilliant set, which transforms the boxy theater into a brightly lit boxing ring. Kelly uses the ring beautifully to orchestrate conversations, often keeping one person in the ring while the other paces around it, thus forging a dynamic tension that keeps characters sizing one another up like sparring partners.

Kelly has directed his boxers to accentuate the eroticism of boxing, but this tango machismo isn't enough to make the drama add up to anything meaningful. By play's end, when one of the boxers lies dead in the ring, the work has wandered far afield of what initially made it interesting.

Blade to the Heat may not be a knockout, but with a great cast, an intriguing take on a familiar sport, and some fascinating moments, it does score a solid hit. ▼

Blade to the Heat continues at New Langton Arts through March 16. Call 550-7250 for information.

OBITUARY

Louis A. Botto

1951-1997

Louis A. Botto, founder and artistic director of the male vocal ensemble Chanticleer, died last week of AIDS-related causes at his home in San Francisco. He was 45.

A tenor who sang with the ensemble from its earliest days in 1978 until 1989, Botto was widely recognized as a leader in the field of choral music.

With Chanticleer, he created the only full-time classical ensemble in the U.S. today and helped elevate a cappella ensemble singing to a high level of professional and artistic achievement. In June 1996, he received the prestigious Michael Korn Founder's Award from Chorus America in recognition of his contributions to choral music.

Mr. Botto formed Chanticleer in 1978 when he realized that the group of friends he brought together to sing Renaissance music was of professional caliber. He convinced the group to perform their first public concert at Mission Dolores that summer. Within a few years, Chanticleer was touring the country, earning a loyal following and capturing the attention of both funders and presenters. Today, Chanticleer performs over 100 concerts annually across the U.S. and abroad and records exclusively for Teldec Classics International.

A native of Texas, Mr. Botto went to San Antonio College and graduated from Incarnate Word College in San Antonio. While in Texas he directed and acted in the First Repertory Company of San Antonio, in addition to opening and running a health food store and restaurant. He did post-graduate work in musicology at the University of Texas in Austin before moving to the Bay Area in 1975 to earn his Masters of Music degree from Dominican College in San Rafael.

Mr. Botto will be remembered by the many singers, audience members, music lovers, and friends whose lives he has enriched. He is survived by his loving mother, Edythe K. Botto, of San Antonio; his partner, Eric Reiner; Sammy, their dog; his dear friends Dr. Janna Blanchard, Lupe Cantu, Marie Ueda, Dr. Bert Dieringer, Karen Toothman; and many others.

Mr. Botto requested that donations be made in his memory to San Francisco Chanticleer Endowment Foundation, 650 Fifth Street, Suite 311, San Francisco, CA 94107. ▼

Round two

J. Karla Lemon vies for conductorship

by Timothy Pfaff

There is a palpable air of contest in this season's concerts of The Women's Philharmonic. The conductors of its three subscription concerts are candidates for the position of Artistic Director/Conductor, to be filled at season's end. At Herbst Theatre Saturday, it was contestant J. Karla Lemon's turn at the helm. (Her competitors are Odaline de la Martinez and Apo Hsu.) Lemon is Music Director of the Stanford Symphony and a frequent visitor to other Bay Area podiums. Her program Saturday demonstrated her range as an interpretive musician.

Impressive as the program was, it intermittently caused something like auditory whiplash. Pieces of startlingly different character followed one another in a sequence clearly calculated to win over, then challenge, then soothe and reassure its audience. Lemon gave her listeners so much to think about, it was hard to know what to think.

What did become clear over the course of this solidly executed concert, however, was Lemon's ability to illuminate musical structures and clarify textures. What sometimes seemed missing was an appreciation of the music's more sensual aspects. Competitions have a way of doing that to music.

Min Xiao-Fen

Lemon imbued the American premiere of Hilary Tann's 1994 "With the heather and small birds" with a straight-ahead vigor that mined the piece for its color and energy but played down the naiveté of its orchestration. (Tann excels at children's piano music.)

After a long musical digression that took listeners across three centuries and as many cultures, the concert closed with the American premiere of French composer Melanie Bonis' 1898 "Suite en forme de valse." The three-movement charmer by this prolific if little-known student of César Franck proposes three waltzes of a highly individual character evoked with an orchestral palette as individual and savory as Tann's is monochromatic. The orchestra played it affectionately.

Still, it was hard to get one's ears around "Ballabile," its first and quite possibly most distinctive movement. Bonis' safe, solid, if adventurous harmonies sounded odd, even sour in the wake of the concert's most aggressively modernist offering, "Verblendungen," Finnish composer Kaija Saariaho's noisy, early-'80s one-two punch for orchestra and computer-generated tape.

"Verblendungen" so successfully blends live orchestral sound with taped content that an auditory integrity does emerge from the barrage of sounds, even on a first hearing. Lemon led her players in a fearless, wonderfully committed performance that re-affirmed the

Kudos

SF Symphony wins fourth Grammy

by Philip Campbell

In the weeks following the San Francisco Symphony musicians' strike, it has been gratifying to note that there is no obvious lingering resentment between players and management. The concerts have been exceptionally satisfying, and everyone appears glad to be back to work.

Disappointment over the cancellation of a planned recording of Stravinsky's "Perséphone," performed several weeks ago, was mitigated last week when it was announced that the Symphony won a Grammy Award in the Best Orchestral Performance category for "Scenes from Prokofiev's Romeo & Juliet," in a new arrangement by Michael Tilson Thomas. The record, distributed on the RCA Red Seal label, marks the fourth Grammy for the SF Symphony and the first under Tilson Thomas.

The big news two weeks ago was the return of guest conductor Roger Norrington to the podium for an all-Mozart program. It has been two years since Norrington's last visit, and while I was hardly eager to see him again, I must confess to a certain admiration for his meticulous performance practice and selfless stage presence.

As founder of the London Classical Players (in 1978), Norrington became one of the earliest and most influential of the "historical performance" advocates. We are in his debt for clearing away years of accumulated inaccuracies. Still, I remain one of those heretics who prefers a more burnished approach to Mozart, so I'm happy to report that the Symphony No. 36 and Serenade No. 9 were performed on modern instruments.

Last week, in what turned out to be the most exciting performance since the players returned to work, John Adams conducted a stunning reappraisal of his choral blockbuster Harmonium, which was commissioned by the SFS in 1980, premiered here under Edo de Waart in 1981, and ignored in the intervening 13 years. Although previously recorded by de Waart (on ECM) and by Robert Shaw (on Teldec), Adams will lead what is presumably the definitive performance for Nonesuch during recording sessions at Davies in early March.

Adams has enjoyed an enviable success with the San Francisco Symphony. In 1979, he was appointed New Music Advisor to then-SFS Music Director Edo de Waart. Together the two formed the New and Unusual Music Series, which was unquestionably one of the most important contemporary music forums ever conceived on the West Coast. Then, in 1980, Adams was named San Francisco Symphony Composer-in-Residence, a position he kept for five years and in which he flourished. It was during this time that Adams' testing of the limits of minimalism became so famous, even Esquire got on the Adams bandwagon by adding his name to the list of most influential Americans under the age of forty. Memory of that distinction may have floated back into the composer's consciousness at last Thursday's matinee performance, when, in honor of his 50th birthday, the musicians, Symphony President Nancy Bechtle, and Symphony Chorus Director Vance George sang an onstage birthday tribute to the composer.

As a major player in the heady world of contemporary music, Adams is one composer who is capable of writing cross-over music that appeals to both sophisticated and pop listeners. He is also one heck of an orchestrator. Last week, in addition to his Harmonium, Adams led the first U.S. performances of his orchestration of Debussy's Le Livre de Baudelaire. Soprano Barbara Bonney performed the vocal part, while actress Claire Bloom spoke the text. The results were strangely flat. Bloom was ill-advised to read in the original French, as her accent proved surprisingly poor. Bonney's bright, often rapid soprano, however, proved quite charming.

Adams gave a thrilling account of his Harmonium, in which the astute listener can detect a clear admiration for the transparent textures of Ravel and Debussy. The Symphony Chorus under Vance George dispatched its part with style to spare. The new recording should be a smashing success, a happy celebration of the musicians' return to Davies Hall after so many weeks apart. ▼

B/W Russian

Russia in Black and White: The Photojournalism of Yevgeny Khaldei is a powerful exhibit of a life's work chronicling the history of this bloody century. Born in a Jewish shtetl the year of the Bolshevik Revolution, his mother killed in a pogrom when he was one, Khaldei went on to become the foremost Russian combat photographer of World War II. The exhibit at the Jewish Museum/SF spans five decades from his Socialist Realist photos of the '30s on, but Khaldei's war pictures are its core. His Raising the Red Flag Over the Reichstag, Berlin, May 2, 1945 is as iconic for its era as Joe Rosenthal's image of Marines raising the US flag at Iwo Jima.

In March he will turn 80, but in person Yevgeny Khaldei is full of youthful spunk and lively humor. At the press conference with curator Joan Perlman prior to his opening, he held up favorite prints and told stories, through an interpreter, about photographing Goering at the Nuremberg Trials, and coercing Stalin, Truman and Churchill into group poses at the Potsdam Conference. He spoke movingly about photographing Jewish survivors in the Budapest Ghetto still wearing yellow Stars of David after the city was liberated by the Allies. "Because I wore a leather coat, they feared me, thinking I was SS," he said. "When I said, 'Shalom' and told them I was Jewish, they cried" in relief.

Though he was a wartime hero, Khaldei was the target of anti-Semitic purges by the postwar Soviets, thrown out of jobs at the news agency Tass and the newspaper Pravda. Recently he has received belated international attention, a medal from the French Ministry of Culture, and exhibitions like this one. Walking through it is a vivid communion with 20th-century history. ▼

Russia in Black and White: The Photojournalism of Yevgeny Khaldei is at the Jewish Museum San Francisco, 121 Steuart St., through July 17. Call 543-2090 for information.

A Crisis of Meaning: How Gay Men Are Making Sense of AIDS
by Stephen Schwartzberg; Oxford University Press, $25

A Crisis of Meaning isn't just about making sense of AIDS but making sense of life. It describes walking the tightrope between hope and illusion, grief and despair, and calls for moderation in all things, even the search for truth, admitting that we live within a series of paradoxes that are sometimes best not looked at too closely.

In cracking open a window, author and psychotherapist Stephen Schwartzberg has illuminated the whole house: his investigations of how 19 gay men have adapted to the AIDS epidemic and to their own positive HIV status engages what many of us — gay or not, positive or not — confront as we attempt to invest our lives with meaning.

How does one make sense of life when almost every expectation is shattered, when much of what mattered is no longer relevant, when simply moving from day to day can be unbearably painful? What we believe ought to happen can be shattered in an instant with a positive test result or over a period of years with the accumulated grief and numbness of too many deaths. As Schwartzberg writes, "...we face a profound crisis of meaning: how we previously made sense of the world is no longer valid or useful. And this is the central challenge of trauma — to reestablish life's meaning in a dramatically changed world."

To describe how his 19 subjects have adapted to life in the era of AIDS, Schwartzberg divides them into four styles of adaptation: transformation, in which his subjects make positive steps toward growth, often in surprising new directions; rupture, in which life has become meaningless and agonizing; camouflage, where people cling to irrational belief systems that separate the individual from the community, thus warding off the enormity of AIDS; and impassivity, in which people claim to be unaffected and indifferent. It may seem odd to put the most positive adaptation first, but Schwartzberg wants to make clear that these adaptations are not stages of growth; people won't steadily progress from one step to another.

There is, however, washover between the groups, and certainly movement between them. Those who were "ruptured" may "transform," and perhaps the "camouflage" people can't keep up the self-deception and will move on to either "rupture" or "transformation." Schwartzberg seems most mystified by the impassive group, concluding that these men are simply detached, and AIDS won't change them.

Schwartzberg debunks the "stage" theory of how people deal with loss, examines how punishment and contamination scenarios can establish (negative) meaning, and maintains that the most psychologically healthy response might be rewriting the narrative. He says there is value in not always facing life's challenges head-on: "We respond to an impending threat with a fierce attack," Schwartzberg writes. "Sometimes this frontal attack works ... but often it only worsens the situation. The cloak of our defenses, or our fear, anger or maladaptive behavior, gets wrapped tighter. The harder we try to fight something, the more we may end up in its grip."

This "self-help" book offers no easy answers; even as Schwartzberg recommends an occasional retreat from reality, he hopes the retrenchment will offer a new road toward growth. In this, he's refreshing: while he affirms everyone's right to his own defenses, he isn't afraid to say that some people get more out of life than others. Schwartzberg walks his own tightrope — he believes that in large part we aren't responsible for our own destiny, but we are responsible for how we interpret and make use of what has happened to us.

Unfortunately, because Schwartzberg is focusing so explicitly on adaptations and beliefs, the men who embody those beliefs don't really come alive. He's also undercut by his own honesty: as he illustrates the nuances of the adaptations and the slippage from one group to another, he uses the same quotes again and again, each time viewed from a different angle. This paints a more complex portrait, but the echo intrudes on the emotional impact; we can't get away from the realization that what we are allowed to see has been filtered through Schwartzberg's eyes. A strong writer, he could have opened and closed each section with interpretation and then let the stories stand alone.

Schwartzberg raises vital questions, offers hard advice, and will likely enrage as many readers as he enlightens. We are perhaps at our most human when we try to wrest meaning from disillusionment, and Schwartzberg is masterful at exploring how the search for individual meaning intertwines with community affiliation, concern, and activism. Books like these, which struggle to tell the truth, prod us forward whether we want to go or not. ▼ importance of this orchestra on the Bay Area's increasingly impoverished new-music scene. The audience took it like brave patients undergoing a particularly aggressive teeth cleaning.

The concert's unambiguous crowd-pleaser was a set of string-ensemble excerpts from the cantatas of Camilla de Rossi — superb early 18th-century music, some of which The Women's Philharmonic has already performed and recorded, some of which was being performed for the first time in 300 years at Herbst Theatre Saturday night. The pieces were delightful, even if Lemon's sole concession to historical performance practice meant that violinists and violists stood while playing, as if imitating a European Baroque band. I kept waiting for the KDFC announcer to intone, "Suite from Camilla de Rossi's 'San Alessio,' 1710."

The concert peaked with a ravishing account of Bun-Ching Lam's 1994 "Sudden Thunder," a fascinating composition for orchestra and solo pipa, the Chinese lute. The orchestra's contribution was top-notch, but Min Xiao-Fen's deft, exalted performance of the highly expressive pipa solos set a standard of musicianship so high that everything else Saturday paled by comparison. "Sudden Thunder" belongs on a Women's Philharmonic CD. It's the kind of piece — and this was the kind of performance — you want to live with. ▼

The third and final performance of the Women's Philharmonic takes place March 29 at Herbst Theatre (8 p.m.). For tickets and information, call 392-4400.

REVIEW

Auspicious debut

by Jim Coughenour

Hallucinating Foucault by Patricia Duncker; Eco Press, $21

Sometimes you stumble upon a book by an author you've never heard of and are immediately seduced. Such was the case with Patricia Duncker's Hallucinating Foucault, which I discovered last week on the new books table at A Different Light Bookstore. Duncker was born in the West Indies, educated in England, and teaches feminist theory in Wales. This is her first novel.

Hallucinating Foucault lives up to its strange title and snazzy cover, and (fortunately) has almost nothing to do with the late French philosopher Foucault. The story centers on an earnest young Englishman who is writing his dissertation on a certain "Paul Michel," an iconoclastic homosexual French novelist who goes completely mad after winning the Prix Goncourt. The plot is a map of matching obsessions — a Foucauldian triangulation of Eros, madness and literature. It's also quite charming, if a bit neat in its conclusion. In short, this is a small, chiseled gem of a first novel. Highly recommended. ▼

BOOKS

This is the place

by Glen Helfand

On This Site: Landscape in Memoriam by Joel Sternfeld; Chronicle Books, $27.50 paper; $45 hard-cover

The infamous Stonewall Inn is a sacred site, a building where push came to shove and history was made. But in the 1994 photograph of the building in On This Site, Joel Sternfeld's curiously affecting new book, the structure seems both ordinary and haunted. The nighttime view shows the bar's window decorated for Valentine's Day, the red neon sign lending the place a warm glow. Twenty-five years after its triumphant moment, it's just a place that knowledge infuses with history — but one that could easily be overlooked.

Sternfeld, widely known for his culturally insightful landscape images, photographed dozens of such charged-yet-invisible locations. In a crisp luminous style, he revisits the Los Angeles intersection where the riots began after the 1992 Rodney King verdict; the rubble of the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas; the Florida abortion clinic where Dr.

David Gunn was shot and killed by a right-to-lifer; Dan White's former office; and other locations touched by high-profile violence.

Each full-page color image is captioned with matter-of-fact information regarding the crime or injustice that occurred there. "At hearings held in this room in August 1983, the American Association of Blood Banks and the Food and Drug Administration rejected evidence that AIDS might be transmitted by blood transfusions," reads the text facing a picture of an eerily calm courtroom. Though the image itself is benign, it generates waves of emotion in the right viewer.

On the surface, the book seems like a macabre road trip across America. But Sternfeld's rich color images are too beautiful, his intentions too thoughtful, to appeal to those who might take a kitschy Grave Line Tour of Hollywood death sites. This unlikely coffee-table classic instead is filled with elegant reminders of horrific acts. "Each tragedy demands its own remembrance. Each of them is ours," Sternfeld writes in his afterword. It's a well-illustrated idea, and one that many of us know intimately. Sternfeld makes it visually resonant. ▼

by Sweet Lips

On Sunday, March 16, the Giraffe's major-domo, the inimitable David Webb, will add another stellar veteran to his morning staff. Of course, I'm referring to the one and only, Greta Grass, everybody's favorite full-figured gal. Ms. Girth and Mirth joins Kenny and Nooch to make up the most experienced (read: oldest) openers on the Polkstrasse. So if you wander in for a libation one matin, do be respectful of your elders. Is the Giraffe up to this weighty addition? The slats are weeping as I pen this, but a creaking plank is better than no plank at all, I always say. And yes, Greta the Great is still at Zeki's (Company) on California Street, Tues.-Thurs.

As for myself, well, the early bird catches the worm (especially if it's at the bottom of a bottle of tequila), and I'll be opening the

Polk Rendezvous Fri.-Sun. at 8 a.m. and working till 2 p.m. (in addition to my Thursday hours of 9 a.m.-3 p.m.). My eyelids may be propped open with toothpicks, but I can still pour! The succulent David Kapp tends bar on TGIF, 2-8 p.m. Mention this column to him and you just might get a free drink! (But bring your pennies just in case!)

Come and enjoy our St. Paddy's Day parties on the 16th and 17th — and do break out your shamrocks and shillelaghs! Yes, there'll be green beer, and Irish eyes, though blood-shot, will be smiling! P.S.: The PR is now enjoying the services of jaunty Johnny (formerly of Company), who patrols the plank Mon., Tues. and Sat. nights, 7 p.m.-2 a.m. So flutter on down and peruse this singular sensation!

Big bucks for sash success

by Mister Marcus

The race for Mr. San Francisco Leather 1997 gets started in earnest this week, with hundreds of dollars in prizes, leather title vests and belts, certificates and the opportunity to compete in the Mr. SFL contest (which takes place at the Russian Center on Saturday, April 19) up for grabs.

The $25 tickets for all seats (benefiting the AEF) go on sale at both Mister S Leather locations and at Auto Erotica (4077A 18th Street, second floor) tomorrow, March 7, on a first come-first served basis. Tickets will be $30 at the door if there are any left! The newly renovated Russian Center (Sutter at Divisadero) boasts at least 100 more seats for this year's production, which will be orchestrated by Audrey Joseph of Fantastic Realities working in conjunction with Warren Cave.

International Mr. Drummer Kyle Brandon will co-emcee the event with former Ms. San Francisco Leather Queen Cougar. The entertainment lineup includes the inimitable Solomon Rose, who for two years in a row has wowed them at the Mr. Palm Springs Leather contests.

But what about the contestants? There are pros and cons about being sponsored or entering independently. The judges do not add or subtract any points if you have a bar title or not, and the entry fee for all contestants is $25. Of course, you must be a resident of San Francisco for at least a year and 21 or older.

At my deadline, the Castro Station, Daddy's Bar, SF-Eagle, The Edge and the Wooden Horse were definitely staging contests to compete for San Francisco's premier leather title. The first one is tonight, Thursday, March 6, when Bart Bartholomew will pass his sash to the 1997 Mr. Castro Station Leather. Other leather-oriented businesses and bike clubs may have entries as well, not just bars.

On Sunday, March 16, The Edge will stage their Mr. Edge Leather '97 contest, which offers $300 in cash and a leather studded title vest by David Speer of Image Leather. Working in conjunction with Alan Selby, Eric Weinmann and Phil D'Amico have Danny Williams emceeing the event, plus leather celebrity judges. If you're interested, there's a recruitment party for any prospective contestants on Tuesday, March 11, at 2100. Check it out, and be there on Sunday, March 16, for the $7 beer/soda bust, featuring an auction of dream dates with basket contest winners (attn. size queens!) and other valuable items. Proceeds of the bust and auction go to AIDS Benefits Counselors, so you know Paul Causey will be there to take home the loot!

On Wednesday, March 19, the Mr. Daddy's Leather '97 contest takes place. The action begins promptly at 2100, with IML '92 Lenny Broberg wielding the mike. The winner of this contest will get $300 cash and a title vest plus other prizes not yet announced. The judges have been selected already, and the Olympic scoring system will not be utilized. It promises to be a fun evening at Daddy's, so drop in for the excitement.

Rounding out the week, the Wooden Horse on Polk Street hosts their Mr. Polk Street Leather '97 soiree on Friday, March 21. Eric Weinmann is teaming up with former Mr. Northern California Drummer Omar Moseley as producers. The winner of this first-ever title will receive $200 in cash and a leather title vest by David Speer of Image Leather.

Judges have been lined up for the competition. I advise you to get there early because the Wooden Horse is the smallest (and the friendliest) bar in the Bay Area!

The final bar competition of the month is the Mr. San Francisco Eagle Leather contest on Thursday, March 27, at 2100. We are at a loss to explain the no-show of current title holder, Joe Piazza. The winner will receive $300 in cash and a leather title vest.

That brings the total to five for the bar competitions, but bike clubs and others have been encouraged to enter contestants, so April 19 should be an interesting evening. Application forms for the competition at each bar listed above are available now! Get out there and show your leather pride!

IMs.L update

While leather men around the country are gearing up for IML in May, leather women are on the march to San Diego the weekend of July 18-20 for the International Ms. Leather 1997 competition. The weekend is billed as "You'll get sand in places you've never dreamed of," and Amy Marie Meek's Bare Images Productions is full steam ahead with this year's edition. The host hotel is The Hanalei, with rooms at $99 per night. Their toll-free number is 1-800-226-3830. Be sure to ask for the IMs.L rate.

The action begins on Thursday, July 17, with the contestants' orientation meeting and other events. On Friday, July 18, the leather vendor fair opens at the hotel with a 1900 press party, followed by a basket auction with goodies offered from each contestant to benefit the travel fund for the winner. On Saturday morning, July 19, the contestants face the judges for an interview, and later in the day, outgoing IMs.L Jill Carter will be "roasted" by any and all who dare.

The doors open at 1930 that same night at the Spreckles The-

Lisa Weismuller, Ms. Fallen Angel Leather of Los Angeles, will compete in IMs.L in San Diego July 18-20.

EVENTURES IN LEATHER

Thursday, March 6

Mr. Castro Station Leather '97 will be chosen at that bar tonight. Since there was no press release, I suggest you call the bar to find out all pertinent info.

Picking Mr. May 1998 on the BCC at the Eagle promptly at 2200. Judges former Dyke Mommy Beth Elliott, bike enthusiast Kath Dudak and Mr. SF Bear Bill Adams will put the contestants through their paces. Win $100, fame – and do it for the AEF.

Free HIV anonymous testing upstairs at 933 Harrison, 2030-2230, courtesy of Brad Grant and the Stop AIDS Project.

The Cycle Runners MC hosts its first beer bust of the year at Daddy's, 2000-2300, $7. Billed as a balloon (!)/beer bust.

Friday, March 7

Mr. Northern California Drummer 'Taurus' stages his flashlight party at the SF-Eagle, 2000-2400, with a silent auction of erotic art and prize for most creative "light attire." No beer bust – just buy your own. Over 65 pieces of original art signed by the artists will be on display.

Saturday, March 8

Cal Eagles MC's one-day run to the fabulous Monterey Aquarium. Leaving from Daddy's at 0830, $13. Bring $ for a lunch stop and gas. Returning by 1800.

SF Leather Daddy Loren Berthelson's monthly "Star Butt" buttrageous prize and $7 beer bust at Daddy's, with raffles, prizes, etc. This is a benefit for IML Larry Everett, who recently lost all his possessions in a fire.

Friday, March 14

"Taurus" Webster hosts a Water Boys party/beer bust at the Eagle tonight, 2000-2300. The San-Diego based Water Boys group boasts thousands of members worldwide. Come and find out what it's about! Gush freely and frequently! Whatever happened to "Chuck With the Rimless Glasses, the Golden Shower Queen for Life"??

Saturday, March 15

The documentary, The Castro, airs on KQED Channel 9 at 1930. Set your VCR if you're going to be out on the town.

"Beauty's Revenge III," a mini leather closet ball at the Driftwood in Hayward. Omar Moseley, Irwin Kane and others will be there in drag. Should be a riot!

Around ye olde campus last week, the most exciting thing going was the grand opening of The Loading Dock on Friday night. I took Chicago's Mr. Cell Block Leather Brian-Mark Conover and IML's official photographer Ron Volanti with me, but the line out front stretched almost to Van Ness Ave. We, like lots of other people, decided to visit the place when it was less crowded, but good reports emanated from all quarters.

On Thursday, Feb. 27, seven more chest-worthy men faced judges Patrick Batt, Ron Volanti and 1997 BCC cover man Mike Wieland, who posed the questions. The packed house enjoyed a spirited, laugh-filled evening, and in the end, a native San Franciscan, Mark Seeba, took the Mr. April 1998 spot. The first runner-up was Brian-Mark Conover. As interest in the calendar grows, the number of contestants increases. Mr. May 1998 will be chosen tonight, Thursday, March 6, at 2100. Win $100, fame, perhaps marriage? My photo lab let me down, so no photos of Mr. Seeba until next week.

On Saturday night, March 1, Tom Powers (Mr. April on the current calendar) staged a "Midnight Weenie Roast" and beer bust at the SF-Eagle. Hey, it was a rockin' night with a female rock group, Midnight Picnic, earning an enthusiastic response. Even the breeders wandering around the neighborhood came in to check it out. Daddy Irwin Kane auctioned off various items, and a good time was had by all. Some $500 was raised. Tom Powers is just one example of the spirit that the 1997 calendar men possess!

On Sunday, the Golden State Gay Rodeo Assn. Bay Area Chapter (GSGRA-BAC) staged their Western-style beer bust at the SF-Eagle. The weather couldn't have been better as a huge crowd materialized for the event. Lots of cute cowboys but not a horse in sight! The food was great and so was the entertainment. As late as 2100, the action was still hot and heavy. ▼

The Ladies Who Brunch Dept.: Moze (formerly The Gate) is now serving a reportedly scrumptious brunch, 11 a.m.-5 p.m., on Sundays. If you like a good feed, give them a try.

Don't forget those mistresses of illusion, En Drag, and their two spectacular shows every Friday night at the legendary Kimo's. It's must-see TV and only $3.

On a more somber (and sober) note, workdays for the National AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate Park have been scheduled for March 15 and April 19. They're very appreciative of any help you can give.

Two exciting Polkstrasse events are both taking place at the Wooden Horse. First, of course, there's the bar's monthly (March 27, 9 p.m.) Miss Wooden Horse Amateur Drag Contest, open to "any amateur drag person." Winners get $100, a crown and their smiling puss plastered all over the place! Trannyshack's own Stefan Grygelko will be your emcee. So resurrect those old "Love Hangover" tapes and start to synching!

Second (and not to scoop illustrious leather maven Emperor Marcus I, you understand), the Wooden Horse will be hosting the Mr. Polk Street Leather 1997 Contest on March 21 at 9 p.m. The lucky winner will receive $200, a leather/studded vest (by the talented David Spear of Image Leather), and will go on to perhaps even greater fame and fortune in the Mr. SF Leather 1997 Contest. Mr. Northern California Drummer 1995 Omar Mosley will be your enchanting master of ceremonies. The Revealing Wear portion of the soiree should be quite, uh, revealing. Call 771-8063 for more info.

Flash! Word has just come to me that on Saturday, March 15, David Kapp and James will be celebrating their 10th anniversary with a big bash at the PR. Mucho congrats to these two lovebirds! Aww! Plus, the redoubtable Dolly Dale will be here the week of the 23rd for her golden birthday. Yes, it's the big 5-0 for Dolly, who will undoubtedly hit the half-century mark with her usual style! Lock up the liquor (and the silver) and keep your sons at home! ▼
